CHECK OUT THAT CHASSIS

Victoria Campbell's 1925 Cadillac was invited to compete in this year's new Chassis Class at the Concours d'Elegance. While it was parked on Ocean Avenue after touring the Peninsula along with more than 100 other classic cars, the Cadillac's owner patiently explained to passersby that, in the old days, Cadillac delivered most of its new cars without bodies. If you could afford a chassis, apparently, you could afford to have a custom body built by private coachworks.

Dick De Luna of Woodside brought his 1917 Hall Scott racer to downtown Carmel Thursday as part of the Tours d'Elegance, the prelude to Sunday's Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance. The Hall Scott car, assembled by De Luna from original drawings and parts, has a four-cylinder, 10.5-liter engine that produces 450 pounds of torque — more than most modern sports cars.

Plan B: Next move is up to Cal-Am

By PAUL MILLER

SEVEN YEARS after being told their water supply was mostly illegal, the people of the Monterey Peninsula finally saw the price tag for legalizing it last week: $120 million up front, plus $6.4 million a year.

That's what it will cost to produce 10,730 acre-feet of water, with most of it coming from a giant desalination plant to be built next to the Moss Landing power plant, according to the final Plan B report released Aug. 9 by the California Public Utilities Commission.

The water is needed to comply with a 1995 state order that the community quit pumping most of its water from the Carmel River.

Assemblyman Fred Keeley, whose 1998 legislation required the PUC to come up with water supply options for the Monterey Peninsula, declared that a proposed dam on the Carmel River is dead.

"For this community, it's either Plan B or you don't solve the water supply problem,' Keeley said.

He described Plan B, which calls for upgrading an underground storage project in Seaside as well as building the desal plant, as "a viable option that has been studied sufficiently so it can go forward."

Now that the plan has been finalized by the PUC, Keeley said, the next step is for the California-American Water Company to decide if it wants to build Plan B rather than a dam.

Voters won't get to choose park district directors

By MARY BROWNFIELD

PENINSULA RESIDENTS wondering who should get their votes for a spot on the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District board of directors need not think about it any longer. No MPRPD election will be held Nov. 5, because no one is vying for the positions.

Only incumbents Zad Leavy and Mary Dainton filed in their respective park district wards for election this fall. Director Judi Lehman, who also serves as a director of the water board, decided not to run for re-election to the parks board. Although the filing date was extended another five days to see if anyone else would step up to run, no one did before it closed at 5 p.m. Aug. 14.

According to Monterey County Registrar of Voters Tony Anchundo, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors will now appoint someone to fill the four-year term vacated by Lehman.

Incompatible offices?

Just days before the nomination period opened last month, former water board director Ron Chesshire questioned the legality of Lehman serving in two elected positions and whether her votes on board matters were also illegal.

Chesshire, who was unseated by Lehman a year ago, asked in July 12 letters to the water district and MPRPD if her dual roles

RLS grad/fighter pilot Ty Phillips in Operation Enduring Freedom

By SISSI MALEKI

IT WAS a chilly, moonless night in January, shortly after midnight, at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in North Carolina.

Captain Tyler "Ty" Phillips, 30 — a Monterey County native and 1990 graduate of Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach — looked over his $100 million F-15E Strike Eagle.

More than 100 days had passed since Sept. 11. Phillips and his squadron, the 335FS Chiefs, had been patrolling American skies, protecting key "national assets" since terrorists attacked New York and the Pentagon. But now they'd be flying east. As in "the Middle East."

Not only was Operation Southern Watch (to keep an eye on Saddam Hussein) continuing along the Iraq-Kuwait border, but Operation Enduring Freedom — to rout the Taliban from Afghanistan and disrupt Al Qaeda — was heating up, too.

On this night, Phillips hoped the intercontinental flight would go without a hitch; the day before, they had finally taken off after days of heavy snow, only to turn back two hours out when their tanker developed mechanical problems.

(Air Force rules require fighter jets to fly in formation with a tanker, topping off their tanks every half hour.)

"Bevo," the young, mellow lieutenant who was Phillips' Weapons System Officer, voiced the same hope for a hassle-free flight.

(The WSO sits in the F-15E's back seat and monitors the positioning of the jet vis-à-vis targets for their laser-guided bombs. Though the pilot navigates, controls the radar, and has final authority for dropping

From the cockpit of his F-15E fighter jet, pilot Ty Phillips has seen Iraq, Iran and Afghanistan — destinations about as far as you can get from RLS High School in Pebble Beach.

TALBOTT SUES WINERY OVER $343K GRAPE BILL

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A LOS Angeles company bought $400,000 worth of Chardonnay grapes from Robert Talbott Vineyards and Winery last year to make wine in Napa Valley, but so far has paid just a fifth of what is owed, according to a lawsuit filed in Monterey County Superior Court Aug. 8. Talbott is suing Smith-Anderson Enterprises, Inc., maker of Stonehedge wines in St. Helena, for the balance.

The company ran up a $401,894.25 bill for 350 tons of Chardonnay grapes shipped after the 2001 harvest, but only made one payment of $75,000 in April of this year. Attorney Anne Secker, who filed the complaint on behalf of Talbott, said Smith-Anderson paid for the 350 tons it received in each of the previous years since the contract began in 1998.

Talbott's complaint asks the court to stop Smith-Anderson from selling its wines to pay other creditors and make profits rather than pay the grape grower, which is still owed $343,080.13 plus interest. The vineyard already has a producer's lien on anything made from those grapes, but wants to ensure others don't cut in on the proceeds.

"Given the fact that Defendants are not able to pay their bills as they become due, Defendants may be pressured by other creditors to dispose of the wine made from grapes Talbott supplied, without regard to Talbott's producer's lien," the complaint reads. "If such disposal occurs and if Defendants are insolvent, then there will be no wine and no other assets to satisfy Talbott's producer's lien."

Secker said California state law gives growers priority when it comes to getting paid.

"A lot of these processors can only do what they do to earn money if they have our grapes, so the legislature said, 'It's only fair if you guys get paid first,'" she explained.

Smith-Anderson should also be forced to "maintain possession of the wine produced from grapes supplied by Talbott pending the outcome of this case; care for the wine in the ordinary course of business and to do everything that is normal for a vintner to do to preserve the quality and quantity of wine made from the grapes Talbott provided to Defendants; and avoid taking any action which would impair the value or quality of the wine pending the outcome of this case," according to the complaint.

In addition to seeking attorney's fees and reimbursement for the costs of the lawsuit, Talbott asks the court to order the sale of all wines made with Talbott grapes so the grower can be paid.

Shahin Shahabi, president of Smith-Anderson Enterprises, Inc., could not be reached for comment. His winery, Stonehedge, is located in St. Helena and sells a variety of wines ranging from $9.99 to $30 a bottle, with a limited edition five-liter etched bottle of its 1997 Napa Valley Cabernet Sauvignon selling for $300.

Secker said Smith-Anderson is in the process of being served with the lawsuit, but that she hasn't been able to reach anybody there.

"When companies don't have money, it's not unusual for them to try to ignore us," she said. "But it always works better in the end if they try to make proposals and work things out with us rather than not communicate at all."

Water district pumps more money into steelhead rescues

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE STEELHEAD refuge at Sleepy Hollow in Carmel Valley — plagued in the past by disease, predatory ducks and power outages — has been closed all summer because a pump failed and there was no way to keep the water flowing.

But biologist Dave Dettman said even without the refuge the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District has rescued more than 32,000 of the young threatened fish this summer by moving them from drying pools to deeper parts of the Carmel River.

And the sand-filled pump that ground to a halt last March was finally repaired and crews began testing the facility this week, according to senior hydrologist Darby Fuerst.

The MPWMD Board of Directors also decided last month to replace old equipment and hire more staff to help pull steelhead from river shallows during dry months and move them to water where they can survive until winter rains swell the river again.

But some river watchers are calling the rescues a failure. Roy Thomas of the Carmel River Steelhead Association criticized the million-dollar operation at a July board meeting.

"The fish rescues are not helping at all," he said.

Thomas later told The Pine Cone that studies in Idaho showed that adding more and more fish to an area actually kills them rather than saves them. He likened it to moving everyone in Carmel, Pacific Grove and Monterey to Seaside.

"There's only so much space to live in, especially when someone's using up all the habitat, food, and places to hide and keep cool," he said. In addition to fighting over limited resources, the fish use up a lot of energy reestablishing the pecking order every time new fish are added.

The big ones sometimes eat the little ones, and other predators — such as birds and raccoons — find the big pools full of steelhead and have a feast, according to Thomas.

"Not only do you not get more survival by overpopulating an area, you actually get a net loss," he said.

Dettman defended the practice, saying that while it's less than ideal to relocate fish in the river rather than to the Sleepy Hollow refuge — with its cool, constantly flowing water and protection from predators — it's better than nothing.

"Not rescuing fish [from drying pools] is not acceptable," he said.

Thomas suggested the water district hire his group or the Monterey Bay Salmon Trout Project, both of which have rescued and raised steelhead in ponds or transported them to the more roomy lagoon, to do future rescues.

CRSA members have also been frustrated by the water district's inability to operate the refuge properly. Taking five months to get a pump fixed is a case in point, he said.

"The Carmel River Steelhead Association is a group of volunteers who believe in action and getting things done, and unfortunately, like all bureaucracies, the water district moves very, very slowly," he said. "But you can't do that in a situation dealing with living creatures."

The district did improve the Sleepy Hollow facility, somewhat. The MPWMD's board of directors in July approved:

- $49,500 to replace the fish transport truck, which Dettman said is a 10-year-old vehicle that had been modified to carry fish;
- $7,300 to place new bird netting on the rearing channel, since the existing netting will keep out Merganser ducks but can't protect the fish from the kingfishers that have learned to tuck their wings and fit through the mesh;
- $7,600 to pay two seasonal fish rescue workers;
- $2,988 to renew the maintenance agreement for the standby generators; and
- $6,300 to purchase a new, higher-tech, safer backpack electrofisher to replace a rickety old one.

The next task will likely be to deal with increasing amounts of sediment spilling over San Clemente Dam, according to Dettman. He suspected that sand broke the rearing facility's pump this spring.

Despite the criticism leveled at the district, Dettman said its efforts have made a difference in steelhead populations over the past decade.

"The biggest plus side is the resurgence in adults we've seen since this began, and we are also seeing more and more fish being rescued," he said. "Counts at San Clemente Dam are between 600 and 900 fish, and that's quite a bit. During the last drought in 1992-93, it was down to the teens."

PARK DISTRICT

violated the state's Common Law Doctrine of Incompatible Offices.

According to the law, offices are considered incompatible when "there is any significant clash of duties or loyalties between the two offices; whether considerations of public policy make it improper for one person to hold both offices; and whether either officer exercises a supervisory, auditory, appointive or removal power over the other."

The state attorney general or the courts decide whether two elective offices conflict, and only after someone has alleged they do, according to David Laredo, attorney for the water district.

"They are assumed compatible until contested," he said.

The court case that created the Common Law Doctrine of Incompatibile Offices — People ex rel. Chapman v. Ramsey — decided a city judge could not accept an appointment as city attorney.

The attorney general has determined that numerous offices are incompatible, such as serving as both county and city planning commissioner, county planning commissioner and county water board member, and county superintendent of schools and director on the state board of education.

Some jurisdictions have special rules allowing people to hold what would normally be incompatible offices. The water board, for instance, includes a mayor — David Pendergrass — and a county supervisor, Dave Potter.

Even if two offices are considered incompatible, the new position automatically takes precedence over the old.

"But that's if they are incompatible," Laredo said. "And there are lots of individuals who hold more than one office."

He would not say whether Lehman's two offices conflicted.

"Irrespective of any decision as to whether or not the positions of park official and water official are incompatible, the bottom line is, by law: The second seat causes one to vacate the first seat," he said.

Joe Donofrio, general manger of the park district, responded to Chesshire that the issue of Lehman serving on two boards is "beyond the purview of the park district."

But that was not Chesshire's only question.

"If one is not to serve simultaneously on two elective boards that are in conflict, are the actions of the respective boards invalidated in which the person in question made up the passing vote?" Chesshire asked.

While Laredo maintained that issue was moot from the water district's viewpoint because Lehman's role there is legitimate regardless of compatibility, Donofrio responded that he was "not aware of any occasion since her election to the water management board in which Ms. Lehman's vote on the park district board was the passing vote."

Chesshire told The Pine Cone he is not planning to pursue the matter.

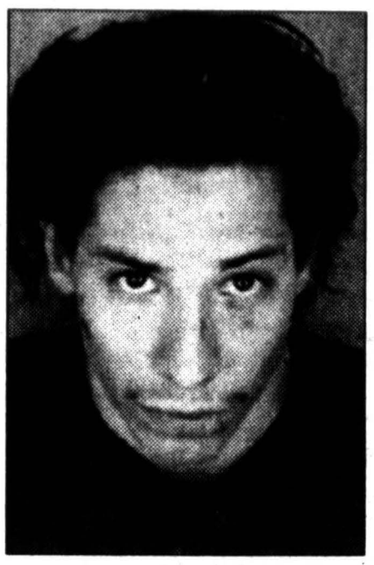
Police I.D. suspected Mercedes thief

By MARY BROWNFIELD

CARMEL POLICE believe a Seaside resident stole a Mercedes and other valuables from a Carmel residence July 12, led police on a chase and ditched the car on a Monterey street after being tracked by the Mercedes' high-tech satellite system.



Patrick Hernandez

Police received a tip that Patrick Hernandez, a 27-year-old Harcourt Avenue resident on parole out of Nevada for burglary, might be responsible for the late-night break-in at the San Carlos Street home of Joseph Frank Cappuccio and Ann Marie Zambrana, according to CPD Detective Sgt. Terry Chandler.

The victims were burglarized late July 12 or early July 13 as they slept. After finding an open window around 4 a.m. and discovering credit cards, checks and the Mercedes were missing, Cappuccio and Zambrana called police.

Tracking car and cards

The following day, the thief used their stolen credit card to buy gas. He made fraudulent purchases in Castroville, Salinas and Marina, and was spotted and pursued by Seaside police. They lost him, but located the car late the evening of July 13 on Sixth Street in Monterey by using Mercedes' Global Position Satellite tracking system, Teleaid.

They now suspect the thief was Hernandez, who last lived in Seaside and may still be in the area, Chandler said.

He described Hernandez as 5 feet 5 inches tall, 155 pounds and having long hair, often worn in a ponytail or braid.

Anyone with information on his whereabouts should contact Carmel P.D. at 624-6403. He is also wanted by Seaside P.D., according to Chandler. The anonymous tip line at the Seaside police department is 899-6282

Kids invited to safety meeting

TULARCITOS PARENTS — concerned about their sons' and daughters' safety after a series of alleged confrontations between men and children in the area last June — have scheduled a Child Safety & Awareness meeting for Aug. 27 at 3 p.m. in the multipurpose room at the school. Dave Crosier, a crime prevention specialist with the Monterey County Sheriff's Department, will tell the children how to stay safe and aware. Kids of all ages are invited to attend.

Police ask Carmelites for eyes, ears — but not hands

By MARY BROWNFIELD

DOES THE stranger walking down your block look like a burglary suspect? Is the car parked at a neighbor's house the same vehicle seen at the scene of a bank robbery?

In a town where everyone knows practically everyone else and residents notice most anything out of the ordinary, it only follows that police would want citizens' help in stopping crime and spotting suspects.

Carmel Police Chief George Rawson introduced a program to the Carmel City Council Aug. 6 which he said will enable residents and business people to assist his officers with everything from catching bad guys to stopping scams. With Community LINKS — which stands for "Linking Information to Neighborhoods for Knowledge and Safety" — police will disseminate important information around town via e-mail, according to Rawson. Lower-tech households and businesses could receive faxes instead.

"The goal is to provide information, and then let the community be the eyes and ears and make that phone call if they believe they see something we're looking for," he said.

Participants who sign up would receive messages such as:

- BOLs (be-on-the-lookouts) for a vehicle or a person;
- crime prevention warnings and scam alerts;
- descriptions and photos of wanted individuals believed to be in the area;
- crime trends;
- traffic accident data for specific parts of the city;
- road closures and impacts on parking or traffic;
- weather warnings;
- crime information or suspicious activities related to past events; and
- code enforcement tips and other educational issues.

No cowboys, please

But just because people will know who is wanted by police, that does not mean they should go out and try to apprehend criminals on their own, Rawson cautioned.

"They are not empowered to take action, only report back to us," he said. "We're not looking for anybody to take matters into their own hands or act in any way that would jeopardize their safety."

Rawson hopes having more people on the lookout will also serve as a deterrent.

"In the world of criminal offenders, there is always the fear of apprehension, so the higher that level of fear, the more likely you are to deter that person from committing a crime," he said.

So far, two dozen people have signed up for Community LINKS, which should get under way in about two weeks. Rawson presented the program to the neighbor-helping-neighbor group, St. Bernard, last month and hopes to introduce it to other community organizations soon.

"We have a lot of crimes that occur from people living outside our city," he said. "We want to protect it as best we can, and I think this will be a great way for the community to help us."

Carmel Valley

Drivers will grapple with gravel on Los Laureles Grade, other valley roads

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A FLOCK of orange-vested workers and trucks loaded with oil and gravel will descend on Los Laureles Grade Aug. 19 when the county begins its five-day resurfacing project on the six-mile road. Drivers should take alternate routes during the 9 a.m.-to-4 p.m. construction hours — which will include lane closures — or give themselves more time to get where they're going, Monterey County Public Works warned.

While Los Laureles is slated to receive the county's oil-and-gravel treatment — which usually leaves behind loose rocks that threaten traction and ding paint — drivers will be relieved to know a light "fog seal" will be placed over the gravel to keep it in place, according to public works director Lew Bauman.

The grade — a highly traveled corridor linking Carmel Valley Road to Highway 68 — needs resurfacing to waterproof the old asphalt surface and seal cracks before the road begins to fail. Between Aug. 19 and Aug. 23, Los Laureles Grade will be covered in 216 tons of oil and 1,552 tons of gravel, according to Dennis Esteban, an engineering technician for the county.

Bauman said the process will preserve the road for another four to six years.

"Preventative maintenance is orders of magnitude cheaper than fixing roads," he said. "We'll use the chip seal/fog seal treatment, but ultimately we would like to overlay this road."

At $500,000 per mile, asphalt overlay is almost 20 times as expensive as chip seal, which runs $25,000 to $30,000 per mile, according to Bauman. The more thorough treatment will have to wait until the county gets more money for road work.

P.G. SALES SLUMP MILD COMPARED TO UPCOAST NEIGHBORS

By ROSE EVERS

THE BAD news could be a lot worse in Pacific Grove, where the sales tax is five to six percent lower for the first half of 2002 compared to the same period in 2001.

Compare that to the San Francisco Bay Area, which has been pummeled by the recession: San Francisco, San Mateo and Santa Clara counties' sales tax bases have all dropped 12 to 18 percent.

According to a report by city administrative services director Pete Woodruff, the Pacific Grove's fiscal year sales tax receipts will be about $1,640,000 — a bit more than the $1,620,000 the city expected after the recession hit.

Restaurants had the biggest decline, with sales down about six percent. In the first quarter of 2002, eating establishments forked over $9,000 less to the city than they had the year before.

"I was really surprised in terms of how far restaurants are down,"said Mo Ammar of the Pacific Grove Chamber of Commerce. "What's interesting is that the restaurants that cater to locals are still busy but the tourist places are down."

It all makes sense when you see where the visitors hail from. Ammar said 90 percent of the city's "feeder market" is Northern California, an area hit hard by the dotcom crash.

"That's obviously where we're getting hurt,"said Ammar.

Dorothy Maras, director of operations for the Old Bath House at Lover's Point, says her business has dropped between three and four percent but it's not surprising given that the 2000 and 2001 seasons were blockbusters.

"We got spoiled during those years. That period of time was a total anomaly, with the economy, the dot-com boom and the U.S. Open. That's not the norm," said Maras.

Maras still turns away people on busy Friday and Saturday nights, and the challenge is to entice diners on weekday nights, boom period or no. That's why the restaurant sends out discount coupons locally and offers preferential seating to neighbors.

"We always market to locals. They are our bread and butter. The tourists are just the icing on the cake," Maras said.

The city's hotels and inns have staved off a big drop in revenue, although they are filling fewer rooms. The city's TOT, or transient occupancy tax, dropped only three-tenths of a percent for the second quarter 2002. According to Ammar, hotel owners have made up for fewer guests by charging a bit more for their rooms.

Meanwhile, it looks like some vacancy signs will be hanging in retail space downtown

Designer's Loft is closing its furniture showroom although it will continue to do design services, according to a store employee. That will free up around 8,000 square feet — space that was empty for more than five years after Sprouse-Reitz shut its doors in 1992.

Rumors that Homescapes, the two-story art and lifestyle store in the old Grove Laundry Building, is either closing or for sale are swirling around town, but owner Tom Finklang wouldn't comment, except to say that "the store is open and doing business."

The city projects flat revenues next year. If citizens want to start an upward trend, now is the time to vote with their pocketbooks, said Ammar.

"If we love Pacific Grove — and I think Pacific Grove has the most loyal residents — and if we want to maintain the quality of life and to maintain the neighborhoods, we should all shop locally,"said Ammar.

FIRST DAY OF SCHOOL WELCOMES PARENTS, TOO.

FOUR CARMEL public schools will participate this year in the "First Day of School Celeb. ation." All parents are invited to attend school for a couple of hours with their children on August 21.

According to the program, research proves that when parents get involved in their children's education, they perform better. "And ultimately, this means better qualified entry-level workers available to the work force," it said.

Therefore, businesses are encouraged to allow their employees off, either paid, unpaid, or flextime, so they can spend time at school on the first day.

Carmel Middle, Captain Cooper, Tularcitos and Carmel River Schools are all participating in the program this year.

Eastwood tells the world why he ran for mayor

By PAUL MILLER

DIRTY HARRY squinted and stared down his interrogator.

"We'll bust this town wide open!" he said menacingly.

But Clint Eastwood wasn't threatening a drug lord, a bank robber or a would-be assassin. He was recalling why 16 years ago — at the peak of his world-wide fame — he decided to run for mayor of tiny Carmel-by-the-Sea, population 4,000.

"Carmel is a beautiful place, but it's weird," said Craig Kilborn, host of the Late Late Show on CBS. Eastwood was Kilborn's guest last week to promote his new movie, "Blood Work," which opened Friday. "In Carmel, you need a permit to wear high heels?" Kilborn asked.

"There's a law against wearing high heels," Eastwood confirmed. The seldom enforced law, passed because the city's bumpy sidewalks can be hazardous to ladies' ankles, has been on Carmel's books since 1963.

But it wasn't the restriction on sexy footwear that convinced Eastwood to jump into politics.

"I felt that the council then — this was in the mid-80s — was very punitive to the population. I felt they weren't listening very much and they weren't very helpful."

So after a few drinks one night with a group of friends, somebody said, "Clint, why don't you run?"

His race against incumbent Charlotte Townsend ended in a landslide victory for Eastwood. He served as mayor — running council meetings, appointing planning commissioners, dealing with civic minutiae — from 1986 to 1988.

"The campaign process was fun, but it's not something I'd like to do again," Eastwood said. The actor-director-producer has lived in the Carmel area for many years.

Kilborn, who also lived in Carmel (in a converted motel room next door to Katy's Place) before he hit the big time in network TV, asked about the town's reputation for ultra-strict planning laws.

Did Eastwood run for mayor because Carmel was "really uptight about building and zoning?" Kilborn asked

"They still are," Eastwood replied. But he said he tried to cut back on the red tape when he ran city hall.

"One time we [the city council] were meeting in somebody's garage. He wanted to change the pitch of the roof. I said, 'I can't believe we're even talking about this. Let's grant it.' And we did."

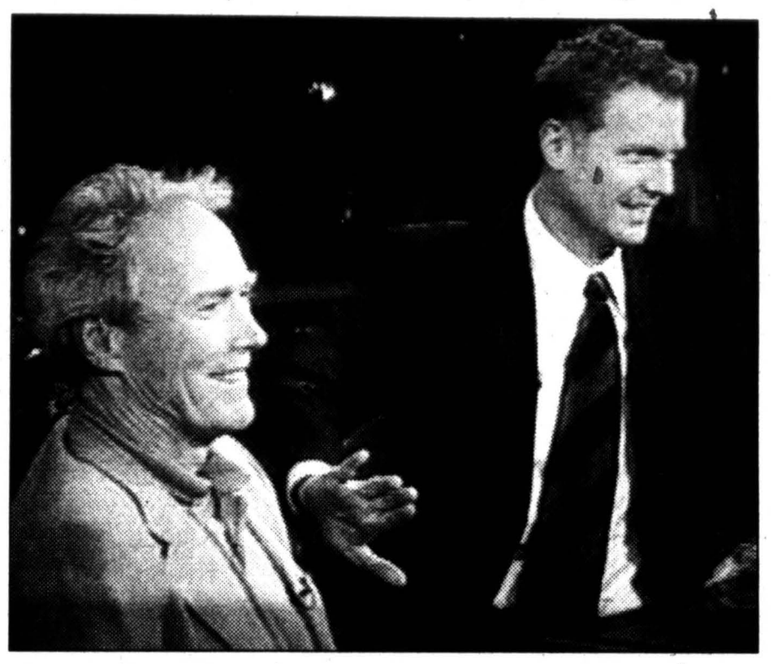
Dealing with the bureaucracy "takes too long," Kilborn offered. "You've got movies to make."

"There are movies to make and there's BS to remove," Eastwood said.

Last week Eastwood also appeared on The Tonight Show With Jay Leno. The lantern-jawed host, who will be in town this weekend competing at the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance, wanted to know how Eastwood handled the day-to-day chores of being mayor of a small town.

"You seem like a private guy to me," Leno said. "Did people come up to you and say, 'Hey! The street light's out in front of my house!'?"

'No, they didn't. We don't have street lights in Carmel,"



CBS

Former Carmel mayor Clint Eastwood gives tips on BS removal to one-time Carmel resident Craig Kilborn, on the Late Late Show this week.

Eastwood patiently explained.

Leno also asked whether, in his new role as a member of the California State Parks Commission, Eastwood had the power to arrest people.

"It's an advisory board," the star said. "I'm not a park ranger."

But Kilborn took that line of questioning further.

"You're a scary guy. I'm scared right now because I don't know what you're going to do. When you were mayor, did you carry a gun?"

Eastwood didn't hesitate: "Yes I did. A machine gun."

"Blood Work," starring Clint Eastwood, Jeff Daniels, Paul Rodriguez and Angelica Huston and with an appearance by Dina Ruiz Eastwood, is playing at the Lighthouse Cinemas in Pacific Grove. The movie is rated R.

Wherever there's smoke, there's sure to be a Carmelite

By MARY BROWNFIELD

AS THE biggest fires in Oregon's history raged this month, numerous Red Cross volunteers — including Carmel resident Glenna Teti — worked to make life less traumatic for the hundreds who couldn't go home.

Teti spent two weeks feeding displaced people at a disaster shelter in Grants Pass before heading to Crescent City and out into the field on an emergency vehicle from which she handed out meals to residents, firefighters and smoke jumpers.

Soon after crews got the blazes under control this week, volunteers began returning home. Teti flew back to the Peninsula Aug. 14.

Teti, who began volunteering at the Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross in April 2001 after she retired, has helped victims at two disasters: 9/11 in New York City and the fires in Oregon.

The Grants Pass shelter — set up in a school — provided cots, amenities and, most importantly, food to people who were forced to leave their homes while the fires raged. Not many of them whiled away the hours watching one of the shelter's two TVs.

"Smoke drove a lot of people from their home but they would still rather be outdoors than in a shelter. And the weather is quite tolerable this time of year, so they tended to sleep out or camp and then come in and get food," she said.

Mostly older residents with respiratory illnesses and young children slept at the shelter, but everyone who passed through — even if just to grab an apple and a bottle of water — thanked the volunteers for showing up to provide solace during uncertain times.

"The American Red Cross is an amazing operation, because we're all volunteers who come in for about three weeks and then leave," she said. "Can you imagine what it would be like trying to run a company where all the employees up and down the ranks change every three weeks? It's mind boggling that they can make it happen."

Teti said the organization's disaster preparedness classes taught at every chapter in the country go a long way.

"There's nothing like being on site to see what's happening, but the processes and rules and so on that you've learned before you get here — everybody has learned the same rules," she said. "There were people here from Georgia, Michigan and other states, but we all knew what to do and we all worked well together."

The circumstances can be intense, and Teti said volunteers often befriend each other while spending so many hours working in close quarters.

"You'll meet someone for the first time at one disaster and who knows? A few years down the road, you might meet them again on a different assignment."

Red Cross volunteers help not only at disaster sites, but with everything from feeding blood donors at the chapter house to offering pro-bono services and coordinating donations. Anyone interested in lending a hand should contact the Carmel Chapter House at 624-6921.

Computer stolen from Carmel Valley church

OUR LADY of Mount Carmel — the Roman Catholic church on El Caminito in Carmel Valley — was burglarized during the night Aug. 8 or early in the morning Aug. 9. The burglar made off with the church's computer system and monitor.

Carmel Valley resident James Munoz, who handles maintenance at the church, noticed when he came into work around 8 a.m. Aug. 9 that someone had pried open a sliding glass window to get inside. Munoz contacted the Monterey County Sheriff's Department and reported the break-in.

Deputy Bill Cassara, public information officer for the sheriff's department, said the burglar ransacked the small church office but found nothing worth stealing other than the computer hard drive, scanner and monitor. The loss is valued at $1,500. The pry marks at the window constituted the only damage to the church.

"In my 20 years of working in nursing homes, I never met anyone who thought that they would end up there. Or, for that matter, anyone who wanted to be there."
No one knows if or when they will need long term care, or how much it will cost. But the fact is that more than 65% of us will require some form of long term care. When it does happen, most of us would want to receive the care we need in the comfort of our own home. But, this doesn't happen automatically. It requires that you take action and begin a careful process of planning and protection. It makes sense, the better prepared you are, the more likely the care will be on YOUR terms, and your decisions won't be made in a time of crisis.

Eagle Scout hopeful seeks to clean up Carmel Bay

By MARY BROWNFIELD

MANY PEOPLE don't realize that what drips from their car or leaks from their garbage eventually ends up in the ocean, and Eagle Scout candidate Jordan Conner wants to do something about it.

He will supervise about a dozen other Boy Scouts Aug. 18 as they paint "No Dumping, Flows to Bay" stencils on about 100 storm drains in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

"I decided to do it because I'm a scuba diver and a fisherman. I love the ocean, and I have seen things there that shouldn't be," said Conner, a 17-year-old Robert Louis Stevenson School senior and the son of Finis and Julie Conner. "We're lucky to be living in a place with an ocean as clean and beautiful as it is."

Jordan Conner

Planned and organized by Conner over the past year as part of his quest for the rank attained by only 4 percent of all Boy Scouts, his Eagle Scout service project will also include fliers, radio announcements and talks at local schools. Teaching kids to be careful is a crucial key to conservation, he said, because they are more receptive to lessons from peers and might develop good habits as a result.

Conner came up with his campaign while working with Carmel Public Works Director Jim Cullem, who had told Conner's scout master he was looking for someone to take on the storm-drain painting.

The scout, who has also scuba-dived in Europe, Greece and the Caribbean, hopes his efforts will give people cause for pause. Proper engine maintenance, for example, will reduce oil and radiator leaks. Those fluids may appear to dry on the pavement but, as soon as it rains, they run into storm drains and end up in the ocean.

"I just want to keep what I've seen here the way it is, if not improve it," he said.

Armed with free beige paint from Last Chance Mercantile, masking tape from Orchard Supply, and brushes, blue spray paint and orange safety vests courtesy of Carmel Public Works, Conner will supervise Boy Scouts between the ages of 13 and 18 from various troops who will help him stencil the storm drains Sunday from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Conner, a Cub Scout for two years and a Boy Scout for about six, said going for Eagle Scout — scouting's highest rank, which demands not only a service project but 21 merit badges and other requirements — has helped him be disciplined at school and at home.

"It's a very difficult and several-year process to get to Eagle Scout, and when you have it, you feel like you've really accomplished something," he said.

Cullem, a former Eagle Scout himself, knows that and is eager to provide candidates with work worthy of their efforts. Every year he sets aside the storm drain project for community groups to handle, saving the city money while offering citizens the opportunity to give something back. The Surfrider Foundation handled the work in previous years.

"I like to see young men come in and take initiative," Cullem said, adding that he knows how difficult and intimidating dealing with adults can be.

Although someone from his staff will be on hand to ensure the scouts stay safe and don't mistakenly damage property with the paint, Cullem said he will ask that person to remain in the background as Conner supervises the whole undertaking.

"That's what Eagle Scout projects are all about," he said.

"The critical issue is to maintain our road inventory in serviceable condition by making the dollars go as far as they can," he said.

Monterey County estimates deferred maintenance on its 1,240 miles of roads will cost $200 million to $220 million, according to Bauman.

The Los Laureles Grade resurfacing is just the first of several projects scheduled over the next few weeks.

Following completion of Los Laureles, chip sealing — but no fog sealing — will commence on:

- Aliso Road;
- Boronda Road;
- Calera Canyon Road;
- Encina Drive;
- Garzas Road;
- Loma Alta Road;
- Los Robles Drive;
- Meadow Place;
- Miramonte Road;
- Panetta Road;
- Paso del Rio;
- Rancho Fiesta Road;
- Ring Lane;
- Toro Road;
- Via las Encinas; and
- Via Poca.

Combined, the roads will be slathered in 177 tons of oil covered with 1,277 tons of gravel, according to Esteban. Chip seal treatment lasts between two and five years.

And in September, public works should begin grinding down bumps and patching the roughest parts of Carmel Valley Road near All Saints Day School and Scarlett Road.

"We appreciate the public's patience. We do the best we can to finish work within the prescribed times but sometimes it requires longer hours," Bauman said.

WHEN MITZI and Ron Verusio, their daughters Kimberly and Esther and son-in-law Michael became owners of Billy Quon's Restaurant at Ryan Ranch about a year ago, they made no changes. "We didn't want to break a good thing," Mitzi told us this week during a telephone interview. "This was our favorite restaurant."

And following Billy's work ethic, they all work long hours. There are always at least two or three owners on the premises at any given time.

Running a successful restaurant requires dedication, and this family has it.

When we dined there last Saturday evening, both the inside and outside dining areas were filled with happy patrons, as was the Lava Room where two parties were in full swing.

Entering through the 60-seat umbrellaed patio set the tone for the evening: Diners were enjoying the warm summer air and a sort of festive atmosphere prevailed. And why not? How many warm summer evenings do we have on the Peninsula? (During chilly evenings, heat lamps are turned on.)

Inside, almost every table was taken as we arrived for our 7 p.m. reservations and were made welcome by general manager Rick Beidoun. Including the Shasta Room and the Lava Room (for parties), 180 diners can be accommodated inside.

Billy Quon's at Ryan Ranch has an incredibly extensive menu, and various specials are offered, starting with an Early Bird three-course dinner from $9.95. An 8-oz. fillet mignon is only $12.95, sand dabs are $10.95, and roasted chicken linguine is $10.95 to mention only a few of the entrées offered. Soup or the restaurant's signature salad or a Caesar salad commence the dinner, and after the entrée a selection of desserts is offered. The Early Bird is served from 3:30 to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday; until 6 p.m. Friday and Saturday, when your entire party must be seated by 6 p.m.; and from 5 to 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

There are nightly specials, too, and on Sunday night at Billy Quon's, there are great dinner values for $15.95: Fillet Mignon with Pacific Rim Salmon; fire-seared rotisserie duck, and char-broiled rib eye steak, for example.

Happy Hour can be enjoyed Monday through Friday from 3:30 to 6:30 p.m. on the patio and at the bar, with a price of $3.75 for standard drinks (all well drinks are premium), Margaritas and Chardonnay or Merlot.

But getting beyond the specials, executive chef David Tyler and his sous chef Francisco Amaya have concocted lengthy luncheon and dinner menus that are as fun to read as they are to eat. Chef Tyler was nominated Western Regional Chef of the Year by his peers in the American Culinary Federation, and was twice named Chef of the Year by the Monterey Bay Chapter of this same prestigious organization.

At our Saturday night's dinner, my dining companion and I shared a Madam T's lettuce cups platter. In butter lettuce leaves we wrapped a tasty mixture of minced chicken, shiitake mushrooms, red bell peppers, green onions and pine nuts which had been incorporated with a char sui sauce.

We've had these lettuce cups elsewhere and have found that we always seem to wind up with sticky fingers. We asked Erik, our excellent server, for finger bowls, but he did even better: He brought steaming finger-tip towels to us promptly. It has occurred to us that serving endive leaves might be a tidier way to serve this dish. The name could be chang-ed to lettuce boats.

Crab cakes ($15.95) as an entrée tempted our friend, who was very pleased with the amount of crab in the two cakes, and with the consistency. Panko Japanese breadcrumbs, sweet red peppers, onion, regular mustard, Tabasco, mayonnaise and eggs are combined with the crab and sautéed lightly. The crab cakes are served with the restaurant's signature salad composed of green leaf lettuce, caramelized ginger walnuts, red bell peppers, tomatoes and cucumbers tossed in a honey-mustard vinaigrette dressing.

Morgan opted for the seafood mixed grill ($21.95). The fish combination changes with availability, and Saturday's was four small (but ample) portions of fresh halibut, salmon, swordfish and red snapper served with steamed rice with a lemon butter caper sauce. The fish was very fresh and perfectly prepared, but we were a little disappointed that no grill marks were in evidence, which are always a flavor enhancer.

All sorts of meats are offered (rack of lamb, rib eye steak, Szechuan ribs, fillet mignon, duck, and wok specialties) run from $16.95 to $21.95; fresh fish from $15.95 to $19.95; and pastas from $13.95 to $16.95. Various appetizers, soups, salads and even hamburgers are on this never-ending menu.

Luncheon is served at Billy Quon's, but the menu is just too extensive to fit into this column. Suffice it to say that menu items are a real bargain; you should try them soon.

Oh, yes, and there's a special menu for children, too.

As we left the upper reaches of Ryan Ranch on that warm summer night, we thought what a marvelous place to watch the meteor showers!

CORRECTION

CARMEL LIBRARY FOUNDATION SCORES AGAIN

HOW DO they do it? The Carmel Public Library Foundation — namely board member Mary May Altenburg — persuaded National Book Award author of "The Corrections," Jonathan Franzen, to lecture at the Golden Bough Theatre and then be the guest of honor at a Who's Who-laden reception, held at the former home of renowned artist James Peter Cost. Franzen, a Harvard grad and Fulbright Scholar who gained unfortunate notoriety by declining membership in Oprah's Book Club, turned out to be a thoroughly entertaining speaker, with a natural, self-deprecating humor that kept his listeners in stitches. His girlfriend, fiction writer Kathy Chetkovich, was also present . . . The charming hosts, Brian Grossi and his wife, designer Marilyn Woods, showed guests around their spectacular home overlooking Monterey Peninsula Country Club's 13th hole and the ocean. The couple, along with their kids, Jenna, 13, and Ariana, 5, are currently transitioning from their Los Altos life, where Brian is in venture capital . . . Co-chair Tom Parks was in great form, clearly pleased with this latest success . . . This was the first event for the foundation's new executive director, Carol Nordhal . . . Virginia Stone caught up with Elisabeth Ungaretti, whose hubby Lou made a very jolly bartender during his shift (is he ever not jolly?) . . . Steve Dolley, there with wife Martha, is a retired banker who now writes cookbooks . . . Others there: Dr. Richard Kehoe and his beautiful wife Rachael, Bill & Nancy Farrar, Jean Draper & daughter Susan, Jeff & Vivian Saper, Gary & Judy Logan, Paula &

A single girl's guide to Concours weekend*

Pine Needles

By Sissi Maleki

IN THE interest of the many unattached Eves in this universe, I have felt it my duty to vet the appropriate Adam-hunting grounds, so the prey can be the type who spends more time behind the wheel than under the hood.

So here's the scoop, based on extensive scientific observation:

1. If you'd rather not depend on your long legs — or lack thereof — and perfect figure — or lack thereof — hang out at the exit gate of the Concorso Italiano toward 4 p.m. Chances are, the layered-clothing look (which hides the curves that overrunneth) will appear legit in the frequently cool weather. And the speed bumps make the Ferrari drivers slow down long enough to get a good look at your come-hither smile. It's an embarrassment of riches for a female hunter.

2. If you're under 25 with a figure most women can only dream of, Laguna Seca's the place for you during the Historic Races. A good selection of older men still in good shape can be had for the taking. Manes of blonde hair, halter tops, and shorts "distressed" at all the right places, work wonders as you stroll by the pits in the paddock area. But leave the stiletto heels at home. You don't want to look like a "pit tootsie."

3. If you're determined to hunt among the hoity-toity set, Pebble Beach's Concours d'Elegance is where to be. But be forewarned: There are wives galore. And they don't take kindly to competition. Sitting in the passenger seat of the classic car is their only chance, each year, of looking regal even with their overgrown boys at the wheel.

Happy hunting, ladies . . .

(any female from 18 to 88)

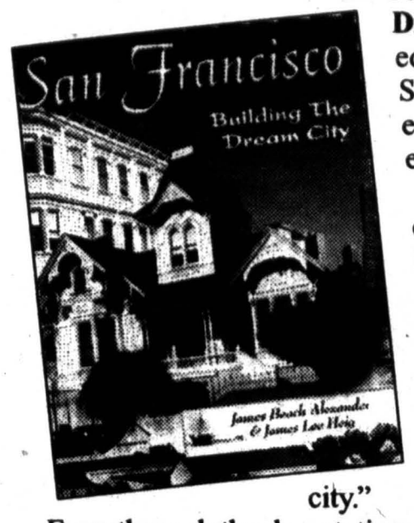
Our favorite city, with all its beauty and foibles, comes to life in remarkable book

THE EXPLOSIVE growth of San Francisco during and after the Gold Rush created a unique city — as eccentric in its architecture as some of its inhabitants — a city that has proudly guarded its colorful reputation.

As James Beach Alexander and James Lee Heig record in their stunning just-released coffee table tome, "San Francisco — Building the Dream," the highly decorated 19th-century houses in San Francisco are "called exuberant by admirers and excessive by critics."



Alexander and Heig explore the connection between people and the buildings they created "to show how people changed the city, how the city inspired its citizens, and how San Francisco became everybody's dream city."

Even through the devastation of six major fires during the Gold Rush years, the 1906 earthquake and fire and the Loma Prieta earthquake of 1989, wonderful changes came about in the city: Take, for instance, just as one example, the destruction and removal of the Embarcadero freeway after Loma Prieta which opened up not only the vista of the bay, but the waterfront for an extensive walking path. With palm trees.

This book is printed on high gloss stock, and therefore weighs about a ton. But the excellent ink holdout on the pages allows the beauty of the 140 full-color photographs to shine through nicely, and even the 455 archival black and white photos are rendered as sharp as possible.

Just leafing through this book and enjoying the many pages of photographs of our favorite American city is a thrill. Reading the city's history is a real revelation.

The 402-page book, complete with a very helpful source page and index, is available at local bookshops for $60.

CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA

ORDINANCE NO. 2002-04

AN ORDINANCE AMENDING THE CITY'S TIME LIMITS ON PERMIT APPROVALS AND DENIALS (17.46.080)

WHEREAS, the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea issues planning permits for, among other items, the demolition of structures in all zoning districts; and

WHEREAS, the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea has limits on the length of time that approval of a permit remains valid; and

WHEREAS, the Municipal Code provides that the Planning Commission may grant time extensions provided the standards under which the original approval was granted have not changed in any way that would make the approved project nonconforming; and

WHEREAS, it is recognized that adequate time may not exist to obtain a building permit within the time limits provided in the Municipal Code when additional permits are required from outside agencies prior to building or demolition permits being issued by the City; and

WHEREAS, an amendment to the time limit provisions of the Municipal Code may provide property owners the additional time required to obtain all necessary permits.

NOW, THEREFORE, THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

SECTION ONE. Time Limits on Permit Approvals and Denials. Municipal Code Section 17.46.080.B and 17.46.080.C shall be replaced in its entirety with the following provisions:

17.46.080.B General Limits.

Unless otherwise stated on the permit, or indicated as a condition of approval by the approving body, the following time limits shall apply commencing upon the date of action by City staff, Planning Commission, or final City Council action:

1. Commercial Design Review - 18 months;
2. Commercial business use permit - six (6) months;
3. Other commercial district use permits - 18 months;
4. Variances - 12 months;
5. Signs/display cases - three (3) months;
6. Residential Design Study - 12 months;
7. Residential District Use Permits - 12 months;
8. Lot Line Adjustments - six (6) months;
9. Subdivisions - 24 months;
10. Demolitions - 12 months.

17.46.080.C Time Extensions.

The Director of the Department of Community Planning and Building may grant one extension of a time limit, equal in length to the original time limit, for those approvals not subject to a public hearing. The Planning Commission may, without a public hearing, grant one (1) extension for approvals, equal in length to the original time limit, originally subject to a public hearing. Except as provided below, no time extension shall be granted if, since the date of the original approval, the conditions surrounding the original approval have changed, or the General Plan, Municipal Code, or Local Coastal Program has been amended in any manner which causes the approval to be inconsistent with the plans or codes. For projects that require a coastal development permit (CDP) as defined by the Coastal Act and/or California Coastal Commission Categorical Exclusion E-77-13, the Planning Commission may, without a public hearing, grant a time extension that extends the life of the permit for up to one (1) year after certification of a Local Coastal Program by the California Coastal Commission regardless of changes in the General Plan or Municipal Code.

SECTION TWO. Severability. If any part of this Ordinance, even as small as a word or phrase, is found to be unenforceable, such findings shall not affect the enforceability of any other part hereof.

SECTION THREE. Effective Date. This Ordinance shall become effective thirty (30) days after its final passage and adoption. All decisions made after the effective date shall be consistent with this Ordinance. The provision authorizing an extension for projects requiring a coastal development permit shall sunset upon the effective date of certification of a Local Coastal Program by the California Coastal Commission.

PASSED AND ADOPTED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA this 6th day of August, 2002 by the following roll call vote:

AYES: COUNCIL MEMBERS: Ely, Hazdovac, Rose, McCloud

■ Fare thee well, Catherine...

An emotional and humorous send-off was organized by the Carmel Business Association for Saks Fifth Avenue general manager Catherine Bartels, at Il Fornaio. She's going to greener pastures, heading up the Saks store in ritzy Chevy Chase, Maryland. In the three years she's been here, she's won the hearts of both business colleagues, customers and strangers. Now she's packing up with her hubby Frank, children Molly, 14, Tyler, 8 and their Wheaton terrier, Abby. But she's already tapping into the right social circles — on her recent trip there, she met with no less than Mark Shriver (Maria's brother), in an upscale gourmet shop . . . Close neighbor & friend Demi Briscoe was heartbroken for another reason, too: "Where am I going to find such great babysitters for my cat!" she moaned. Soon-to-be CBA prez Larry Hoover and exec director Brenda Roncarati, along with a gang that included Al Zarzana, Tom Williams, Robert Hale, Nancy Holden, Tammi Tharp and Gary Luce, got Catherine to promise she'd quickly arrange the first ever "shopping trip bus from Chevy Chase to Carmel!" . . . Catherine — your warm smile and can-do attitude will be sorely missed.

'Fuddy Meers' is absurdly fuddy

By BEVERLY HILL VAN JOOLEN

AT FIRST glance, one doesn't expect more than a few shallow laughs from David Lindsay-Abaire's comedy, "Fuddy Meers." However, like a snake slipping under the charmer's spell, the audience is captivated by the inane and hysterical psychosis of the story and the utter brilliance of the cast.

Theater Review

Poor Clair. A seemingly innocent wife and mother, she loses her memory every night in her sleep. Her patient and devoted husband, Richard, reminds her each morning of who she is. But when Clair slips away from the house with Zachary, a maimed man who claims to be her brother, Clair recovers more than just her identity. She discovers why she wanted to forget it in the first place.

Karen Strutynski, as the amnesiac, binds the band of miscreants together with penetrating and bottomless simplicity. Carey Crockett drips anxious intensity as Clair's husband, and his comedic instinct is piercing in its subtlety. Robert Colter plays Clair's "brother" with a disturbing undercurrent of perverted reality that infects the humor with a sense of forbidden amusement. The audience laughs, but the guilt of the laughter is pervasive.

Secondary characters, counterbalanced off the three principal roles, further darken "Fuddy Meers'" plot. Clair and Richard's angry teenager, Kenny, is played with natural insolence by Tim Snyder and Karen Schamberg, as Girtie, Clair's speech-impaired mother, is fiercely funny. A stand-out, which in this distinguished cast is no easy accomplishment, is Hyson Epstein. Playing Zachary's puppet carrying friend, Millet, Epstein delivers a poignant and at the same time zany performance. May Lin Dehaan portrays Hidie, a cook who becomes an unavoidable accomplice.

"Fuddy Meers" is not for the squeamish or politically correct purist. Its subject matter deals with spousal abuse, teen rage, deformity, and insanity just to hit the highlights. The point of it is irreverence, an habitual theme for the up-and-coming playwright, and the show is an off-Broadway hit.

In talks with independent film producers, Lindsay-Abaire makes no apologies for his style, and has negotiated sole screen adaptation rights to guarantee the play's integrity. Avoiding mainstream film was a wise choice, "Fuddy Meers" is not a mass market comedy.

In this Unicorn Theatre production, directed and designed by Carey Crockett, the characters are more like a group of real people exploiting their conditions for a laugh, than a cast of developed characters unveiling a satirical slapstick.

Lindsay-Abaire notes he was influenced by the likes of Kafka and Lucille Ball. No surprise there, this is precisely the tone of "Fuddy Meers." A touch of the Farrelly brothers to bridge the chasm between tragic and farcical would give both this script and a potential screenplay a less ragged edge. Of course, some like it messy. Just beware of the bite. Quills up!

■ Unicorn Theater stages "Fuddy Meers" at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 7 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 16-18, at the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts, Fourth and Guadalupe, Carmel. For ticket information, call 649-0259.

PHILLIPS

bombs, the WSO acts as a "second brain," utilizing numerous instruments to maximize the accuracy of the strikes.)

After a smooth take-off and non-eventful first few hours, the two-man crew began to relax.

They discussed the briefings just received. Three issues were always of utmost concern: preventing civilian casualties — "collateral damage" — on the ground, avoiding friendly fire, and evading capture if ditching became necessary. As for the Rules of Engagement — dictating when bombs could be dropped or weapons fired — Phillips could probably recite them in his sleep after years of pilot training.

Phillips and his WSO also looked forward to moving from training to action. Their Boy Scout spirit made them want to help people in a tangible way.

Perfectly executing a tactic in training is nothing like saving a group of Special Forces in trouble, or even assisting an old lady across the street. And the daring air-to-air combat maneuvers portrayed in Hollywood's "Top Gun" would, in real life, get any pilot killed within seconds.

During the long flight from North Carolina to the Middle East, they also shared stories about their families. Phillips loved to show photos of his wife Theresa and their kids, and quip, "These are reasons not to deploy!" Phillips also remains close to his parents, retired physicians John Phillips and June Dunbar.

After graduating from Robert Louis Stevenson School he went on to Stanford University for a B.A. in English, and a B.S. and Masters in mechanical engineering.

To choose a career, he made a spreadsheet. "Astronaut" barely beat out "physician." Then he met someone who had flown in the military for 12 years and then went to medical school — all the while raising a happy family. It sounded perfect to Phillips. And being a fighter pilot could lead to NASA.

Friends feared that being called upon to kill might ruin him — darken his heart, so to speak — in spite of his strong sense of self.

He had countered, "Who do you want holding the trigger? Someone who is bloodthirsty or someone who understands and accepts the heavy responsibility because they hope and believe a greater good might come of it?"

Furthermore, Phillips combined life plan would be a way of seeing two vastly different sides: one that trained to destroy and kill in calculating ways, and one that nurtured and saved lives.

Fifty-one hours after taking off from North Carolina, Phillips finally relaxed on his bunk at his Middle East base. He pulled out his laptop and briefly made notes in his journal.

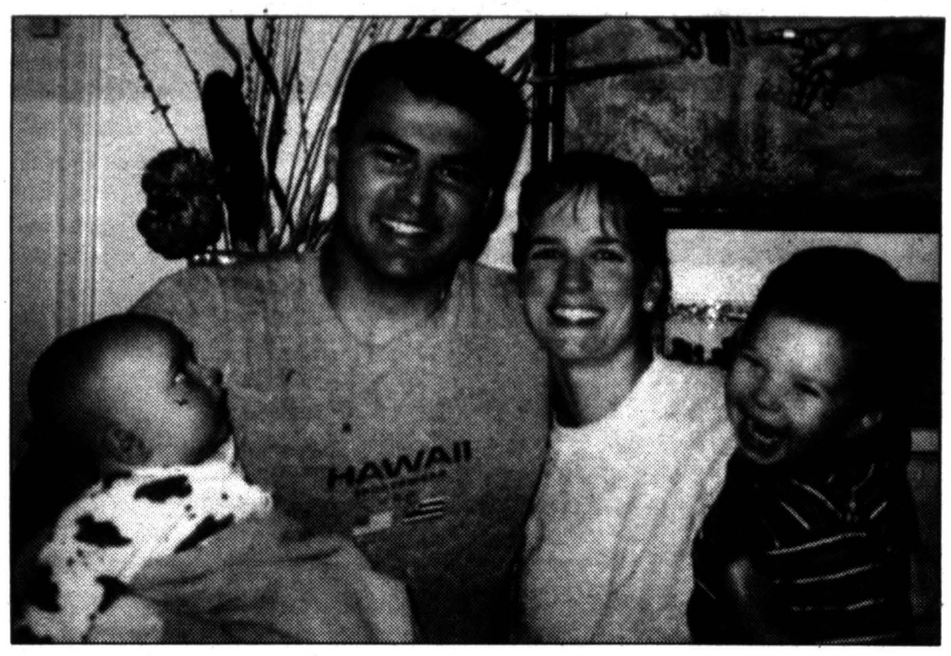
As he fell asleep in the stillness of his first night in a true desert, it occurred to him he'd been awake 48 of those 51 hours.

Then began repeated rounds of 11-hour sorties, followed by catch-up sleep. Tankers flew and maintenance crews worked 24/7. In a four-week period, Phillips managed only two days off when wasn't too tired to get out of his bunk.

He cannot disclose details of his many missions — or even where he was based. But he does say that during his flights over Afghanistan, his F-15E was repeatedly the target of missiles and anti-aircraft fire, but never hit. On his first telephone call home, Phillips eased most of his wife's concerns, especially whether he was getting enough to eat. His reply that he was limited to just two Häagen Dazs ice cream bars per meal took care of that.

What little ol' Ty Phillips from the quiet, scenic Monterey Peninsula was doing and seeing continually amazed him. The serene beauty of landscapes far below belied the highly publicized political turmoil. Through the green glow of night-vision goggles, the mountains of Afghanistan reminded him of the Sierra Nevada; coastal Iran looked like the cliffs of Dover in England. Complacency was tempting and the flight crews had to remind themselves constantly that they were in danger.

And he was struck by how much some in the Middle East liked his country and how much some hated it. Television was one thing; it was quite another to fly over their countries, look down, and hope no bailout would be required.



In four weeks, Ty Phillips logged more flight hours than during the previous five months. He was relieved to be welcomed home from Afghanistan by his wife and young children.

PHOTO/COURTESY

In four weeks, Phillips logged more flight hours than during the previous five months combined.

Soon, with the Taliban quickly defeated and targets becoming scarce, the Pentagon decided it had more fighters than it needed. When no one wanted to volunteer to leave, it was decided that crews nearing the end of a rotation should be the ones to go. Phillips fit the criteria. The anticipation of seeing his family overrode his disappointment.

One month later — and years older — Phillips taxied in at his home base. He caught sight of Theresa holding Loren, and Luke waving at her side. A huge smile came across Phillips' face.

He was home.

Phillips is currently stationed at Sheppard Air Force Base in Wichita Falls, Texas, and training to be an instructor pilot. (Fighter pilots are normally on three-year rotations.) He has also applied to test pilot school at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

He and Theresa will soon visit Johnson Space Center to chat with current pilot astronauts about how they enjoy their lives.

And Phillips still plans to become a physician.

Businesses should help themselves

IT HARDLY seems worth stating. But the lack of support among many Carmel businesses for the proposed downtown improvement district makes it obvious that many of them don't understand the power of advertising. So here it is: Advertising works. If you don't think so, ask yourself this question: Who is Eddie the Echo?

MacDonald's may not have very good hamburgers. But they sure know how to market them. And they have proved time and time again how successful advertising can be.

One day, nobody's ever heard the words, "Howya doin'? Howya doin'?" But after the airwaves, newspapers and magazines have been blanketed with a clever ad campaign, everybody wants to meet a girl from Walla Walla.

Last week, a consultant told the city council there is "no consensus" among business owners that creating a Business Improvement District is a good idea — even though the money raised by the district would be used to upgrade the downtown shopping area and for advertising to lure more visitors to the village — both things that this town badly needs.

The BID is DOA without the support of local businesses. The city council gave a committee one more chance to sell the district. But it doesn't look good. What a shame.

Two years ago, we said Carmel didn't need more day trippers, but BID money could be used to great effect if it were spent on a coordinated campaign to get more tourists to stay overnight. With the economy in the doldrums, even day trippers look pretty good right now.

We'd like to hear San Francisco radio stations carrying ads urging people to come to Carmel for a romantic weekend. We'd like to see more ink for this town in the Chronicle, the Mercury News and Sunset Magazine. We'd even like to see "There's no place like Carmel" spots on television.

Benches on Ocean Avenue — to allow people to rest while they're shopping — wouldn't hurt. And the street could stand to have at least as many flowers as the motels have on Munras Avenue in Monterey.

There's a lot that could be done to make Carmel more attractive and accommodating to visitors. And we'd like to see this town's businesses chip in to pay for it all. The BID is a good idea.

Just ask that duck about AFLAC.

Who's arrogant?

Dear Editor,

Last week's Pine Cone featured a predictably mean-spirited letter from councilperson Barbara Livingston in which she complains that people who voted against her in our recent election do not believe in the future of Carmel, nor do they want to protect it. She also criticizes the mayor and accuses her of being arrogant. Her letter ignores the fact that the vast majority of our voters have rejected the kind of negativity her letter represents. Her comments immediately after the election in which she accused Carmel voters of not seeming to understand what a wonderful place Carmel is tell me all I need to know about who is or is not arrogant.

Perhaps it would behoove all of us to respect the will of the electorate by working cooperatively and constructively to solve the important issue which challenge our city.

Gerard Rose, Carmel

Protecting fish and people

Dear Editor,

This reply is prompted by Howard Skidmore's letter that appeared in the Aug. 2 issue of The Pine Cone.

Howard, it is obvious that you are ignorant of steelhead biology and life history. It is pleasing that you are a good chronicler of the happenings at the lagoon. Your final entry is the crux of the problem: "2:30 bulldozer recuts opening. About 4:30 water starts dropping, all gone in half hour."

This flushing and total draining of the lagoon at low tide is the problem. I'm sure you have watched as the beach turns into a monumental flood and the lagoon is reduced to mud flats, with most all aquatic life — from microscopic forms to all life stages of steelhead — are flushed out to sea. Last year, the biologist employed by Monterey County found stranded, dead steelhead in the tules. Those who watched saw young steelhead taken from the fresh water lens near the surface by hordes of birds and a few seals.

Young steelhead that haven't grown enough and gone through physiological change of smolting cannot survive in pure seawater. During the '87 to '91 drought, the Steelhead Association conducted a project to save the gene pool of Carmel River Steelhead. In this process we observed that 100 percent of non-smolted steelhead die in seawater within a week, and 100 percent of smolted steelhead survive. Unfortunately the lagoon in the fall holds only 10 percent to 60 percent smolts depending on conditions and year. Winter storms do wash seawater into the lagoon but the non-smolted steelhead stay in freshwater portions of the lagoon.

As for the flood wall, the Steelhead Association thanks Alan Williams for his generous effort. The wall could probably be hidden in vegetation and would save the county money in the long run and would allow the river to open to the north or south as does San Jose Creek. Natural breaching would then occur in the fall with light to moderate river flow rarely flushing the lagoon as described by Mr. Skidmore.

A kind man

Dear Editor:

I'd like to take this opportunity to say a few words on behalf of longtime resident Fred Askew, who quietly died two weeks ago.

The Askew family has deep roots in Carmel-by-the-Sea, and no one loved this little city more than Fred, who was a kind and sweet-natured man. He knew every inch of this one square mile and appreciated every plant, flower and tree that grows here.

PLAN B

Cal-Am Vice President Judy Almond agreed that Plan B seems viable but said before the company changes course, "we need to do some homework."

Engineers and financial analysts are going over the plan, she said, to determine if it is "implementable or feasible."

But she would not criticize the PUC's cost estimates for Plan B, which seem much higher than the price tag for Cal-Am's 24,000-acre-foot dam on the upper Carmel River back in 1998: $127 million.

"That figure doesn't include everything that would go with building a dam today," Almond said. There's been some inflation but, more importantly, the steelhead trout and the red-legged frog — both found in the Carmel River watershed — have been declared threatened species since 1998.

"That would require some expensive mitigation work and some additional operating costs," she said. Also, before it could build a dam, the company would probably face expensive litigation and "there's no way to predict what that would cost." Plan B, on the other hand, could have smooth sailing to completion in fewer than seven years, Keeley predicted, if people don't expect it to be perfect.

"If the environmentalists fight it because there is no guarantee it won't produce new water, or if the mayors fight it because there's no guarantee it will produce new water, then we could have problems," Keeley said. "It's important for everybody to keep in mind that this project is intended to solve just one problem: the 10,730-acre-foot overdraft of the Carmel River."

If Cal-Am decides to pursue Plan B, the next step would be to convince the PUC to serve as "lead agency" — which would put it, instead of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, in charge of preparing an EIR and issuing permits for Plan B construction.

That would wrench Plan B away from Monterey Peninsula politics which have paralyzed the community's water policy for years.

At a news conference last week, PUC President Loretta Lynch said the commission is "open to the idea" of being lead agency if Cal-Am makes an application.

A year ago, when California was in the middle of an electricity crisis, the idea of burning fossil fuels to turn seawater into fresh waster seemed laughable. But Keeley is trying to put together a deal to allow the new desal plant to buy electricity directly from the Moss Landing power plant at a much lower cost.

The desal facility would be built next door to the power generating station, at the site of the now-closed National Refractories plant.

The location would allow the desal plant to discharge its brine along with the cooling water from the power plant, avoiding environmental damage to the National Marine Sanctuary, the Plan B report says.

Sandy Claws

by Margot Petit Nichols

Their sleeping baskets are in the kitchen, along with three bird cages that hold a parrot, two canaries and 10 exotic Gouldian finches.

Tucker, 6 months old, is the newest member of the family. Freddie, the most easy-going of the three, comes next, and is now five years old. Sophie, 6, is the Alpha dog in this charming little pack of Westies, and a hunter/chaser who singles out ground squirrels as her quarry.

She has taught little Tucker to help her surround the bush lair of beach squirrels when they hear squeaking and rustling: Sophie takes one end of the sound area, and Tucker takes the other. They wait. And wait some more. If a squirrel should happen to come into view, Sophie will give immediate chase, but has yet to catch one. Perhaps Tucker will learn this considerate hunting skill from his mentor.

Freddie, not as athletic, would watch TV day and night if he could only run that remote. He and Sophie watch television with Mom every evening in the "inner sanctum," from which Tucker is excluded until he can demonstrate he can be trusted not to have an accident or chew furniture. Until then, Tucker hangs with the birds in the kitchen.

Both Freddie and Sophie bark excitedly when a horse or a dog appears on the screen, which more or less rules out watching Westerns. And when that La-Z-Boy commercial with the raccoons comes on, Sophie, the hunter/chaser, just loses it.

New vault, new bank to store Carmel's money

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WORKERS THIS week installed a Fort Knox-style vault in what will soon become Monterey County Bank's newest branch on Dolores Street in downtown Carmel.

As the huge slabs of concrete and steel were hoisted into place, on the other side of the Peninsula artist Dan Koffman was at work on the 16-by-4-foot mural that will grace the bank when it opens in October.

"We're going to pay tribute to the site's heritage, which was the old Village Theater," Koffman said in his Monterey gallery.

Koffman has created the well-known ads featuring Monterey County Bank President Charles Chrietzberg in various guises, including Uncle Sam, Gen. George Patton, a cowboy, a mountain climber and a sumo wrestler.

"Charles believes he can get into a wrestling match with a bigger bank and come out the winner," Koffman said. "What I've tried to show is, as head of a locally owned bank, he can make quick decisions that respond to the needs of entrepreneurs and small business."

The mural in the bank's new branch will show Dolores Street in the old days — when it was the home of Nielsen's Market and a movie theater.

There may even be an old-time popcorn machine in the lobby, Koffman said.

A WEEKEND CAR LOVERS WON'T FORGET

Golf fans, nature lovers and gallery hoppers have to admit: the Monterey Peninsula is now almost as famous for its week of fabulous automotive events as for its golf tournaments, beaches and artists.

This week is the culmination of another year of planning and preparation as car lovers from around the world descend on Carmel, Pebble Beach, Monterey and Pacific Grove with their Bugattis, Ferraris and Model Ts in tow.

Some events are very exclusive. Tickets for the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance, for example, are $100 a pop. Getting your car ready to show there can cost a fortune.

But the P.G. Auto Rally can be enjoyed for free just by visiting Lighthouse Avenue Friday afternoon or by watching the cars parade through the Peninsula Friday evening. For that matter, practically every street becomes a sort of mini-auto rally as the legion of car fans arrive for their favorite event.

Most events raise money for charity. So there's no excuse not to put down your remote and go!

Calendar of this weekend's events

Rolex Monterey Historic Automobile Races
Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 16-18

The quintessential gentlemen's racing event was started by enthusiast Steve Earle 29 years ago with just 66 cars and a paltry handful of spectators, but the Monterey Historics now feature almost 400 entrants in two full days of vintage car racing (and practice on Friday) that showcase models from every automotive era. This year's honored marque is an American sports car icon, Chevrolet's Corvette, celebrating its 50th anniversary. With racers vying for inclusion in the annual historic races, each class features the best drivers and automotive specimens battling it out on Laguna Seca's 11-turn, 2.2-mile racetrack. Drivers do their best not to swap paint on their museum pieces, but competition reigns when it comes down to a fight to the checkered flag. Tickets run $35 Friday only, $55 Saturday only, $45 Sunday only, $90 for three days and $80 for two days. Admission includes paddock access and grandstand seating, with children 12 and under admitted free. For tickets and information, call (800) 327-SECA or visit www.laguna-seca.com.

Monterey man's 52-year Concours romance

By Mary Brownfield

LIFELONG PENINSULA resident and well-known author Randy Reinstedt has admired the rare vintage cars at every single Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance since the now-world-famous car show began in 1950.

And he has never once bought a ticket.

"I was always a car nut," said Reinstedt, who as a teenager started what would become a decades-long romance with the Concours.

"I was at Monterey High School when they started the Pebble Beach Road Races [in 1950], which was the biggest event of its kind in the western United States," he said of the races through the trees of Del Monte Forest which were held annually until 1956. "We'd sneak in and watch the races every year, and then we would always wander down to the cars and take a look at what was then a minuscule Concours."

Even when he left the Peninsula to attend San Jose State University, Reinstedt always made a point of coming home for the races and the Concours.

It was also during that time that he bought the car he would eventually enter in the Concours — after it was totaled on a San Francisco Bay Area freeway.

Reinstedt said he found the 1953 Jowett Jupiter, an English sports car of which only 1,000 were made over a four-year period, after it had been left sitting in a Monterey garage. He bought it for $450 and it became his every-day car.

"I was coming home on the Bayshore Freeway one day, and a guy clobbered me and just totaled the car," he recalled. "The insurance company wanted to junk it.

"I said, 'No! I love that car,' but they said they couldn't get another one."

"I said, 'Can you fix it?' They found a guy who worked building racing bodies and he took it on as a challenge and did an incredible job."

The car savior's renovation work was so impressive, in fact, that Reinstedt decided to have a go at showing it. He entered the Jupiter in a few shows throughout the state before pitting it against those treasured automobiles sprinkled across the 18th Fairway of the Pebble Beach Golf Links.

Randy Reinstedt, who has attended every Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance since the inaugural event in 1950, entered his 1953 Jowett Jupiter in the show 11 times. He took third place, then second, and finally first place in his class — shown here in 1969. After reaching that pinnacle, he never again showed the car.

REINSTEDT

"I thought Pebble was the ultimate car show, so I'd give it a try," he said.

To his surprise, the car was accepted to compete in the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance class for European Cars, $2,500 and Under. Reinstedt soon learned it wasn't a fluke.

"They just kept accepting me, and it took a third, and then it took a second," he recalled. "A Jowett Jupiter taking second at the Concours!"

Though he thought his little British sports car had already reached the top, in 1969 Reinstedt decided to enter it once more — its 11th Concours appearance — and the car won its class.

He was stunned that his car, the very car he had bought for $450 and which had been destroyed in a crash on the Bayshore Freeway years before, could win at Pebble Beach, even if the competition back then was not nearly as stiff as it is now.

"When the guy came and told me I won the blue, I couldn't believe it," he said. "There were other cars that were better, and I knew every flaw in that car — every inch."

He was so surprised that he sent the messenger back to check with the judge — just to make sure there hadn't been some sort of mistake.

"I said, 'Hey, I really appreciate it, I just want to make sure there's not a mix-up because there are at least a couple of other cars that are better,'" he said. "This other car had won six blue ribbons that year throughout California. He came back and said, 'No, I checked with the judge.'"

Reinstedt vividly recalls driving the Jupiter over the ramp — his wife, Debbie, and their young son seated in the car beside him — to accept his prize.

After the show was over, Reinstedt took the car home to Carmel. He immediately put it up on blocks in his First Avenue garage, intending to store it for a few months.

It ended up staying there for more than 20 years.

Car buff Randy Reinstedt currently cruises Carmel in a 1970 Toyota Land Cruiser — the only car he has ever bought new — and this fiesta red 1956 Ford Thunderbird, which he bought from an eager seller for $700.

"I just never entered it again," he said. "That was the ultimate. You can't top that."

He no longer drove it for fun, either, because he was afraid someone would hit him again and he would be out of luck when it came to finding the parts to fix it.

Eventually, he sold his award-winning car.

"From what I heard, the Jowett is now in Texas and owned by the great grandson of the fellow who started the Jowett car company," he said. "I hope that's true, because that means it found a good home."

Although he no longer has that beloved car, or the MG TC he bought from his former college roommate for $500, or his Ford Model T Depo Hack, Reinstedt's remaining wheels are still far from average.

He bought and restored a fiesta red 1956 Ford Thunderbird that once belonged to a Carmel doctor; the family car is a 1970 Toyota Land Cruiser.

"It's so in demand that whenever I drive by the beach, all the surfers flag me down," he said of the Land Cruiser. "It's completely stock, has 400,000 miles on it and is the only car we ever bought new."

After he stopped entering cars in the Concours, Reinstedt began working at the event while volunteering for United Way. The proceeds of the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance benefit the charity.

"Each year, it gets better and better and better," he said. "I'll be the first to admit that in the years I won, it was nothing like it is now."

Reinstedt is one of the few people qualified to comment on how the Concours has evolved year after year — a gift historian Kandace Hawkinson tapped into when she was gathering information and collectibles for a book commemorating the event's 50th anniversary.

After learning Concours officials had been searching the world for examples of each year's programs, posters and other memorabilia for the book, Reinstedt realized he had accumulated a lifetime of Concours treasures.

"I didn't know they were looking for these things, and I didn't even realize I had them," he said. "I am a pack rat, so I would always bring home posters and programs every year. Kandace came over to the house, and she couldn't believe she'd found these gems."

He ended up supplying a substantial amount of material for the book, some of it possibly the only originals left. Racing legend Phil Hill once had a prolific collection of Concours memorabilia as well, according to Reinstedt, but it was lost when the basement of his Beverly Hills home flooded.

His pack-rat tendencies and flawless attendance record are still paying off, too. In gratitude for his help with the 50th anniversary tome, officials decided not only to reward Reinstedt with a copy of the book, posters, programs and tickets to VIP events, they gave him and his wife lifetime passes to the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance.

"That was a perk that I couldn't believe," he said.

He now has no excuse for breaking his flawless attendance record — nor will he ever have to buy a ticket.

PEBBLE BEACH CONCOURS d'ELEGANCE®

2001 Concours topped half-million in charity donations

LAST YEAR'S Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance again raised more than half a million dollars for the local Boys & Girls Club, the United Way of Monterey County, Natividad Medical Foundation and the Pebble Beach Company Foundation. In 2001, the world's premier classic car event presented the local charities with a donation of $544,720, its largest contribution ever.

A big part of last year's fundraising was the raffle that saw excited ticket holders win an Audi TT Roadster, a 2002 Jeep Liberty courtesy of DaimlerChrysler, a 2002 Ford Thunderbird and a 2002 Mercedes Benz C-230 Coupe. The raffle drawing was emceed by "Tonight Show" host Jay Leno and Emmy Award-winning actor Edward Herrmann, both avid car collectors.

"Generous donations from all of our corporate sponsors, and the thoughtfulness of the thousands who support the Concours through ticket sales and our charity vehicle raffle, continue to make a difference in the lives of less fortunate people," says Glenn Mounger, Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance co-chairman. "Our philanthropic efforts would not be possible without the commitment and dedication of our sponsors, volunteers and staff, and the people who help promote this wonderful event, especially our celebrity hosts."

Hollywood celebrities — such as automobile collector Jay Leno (right) — add prestige and help boost entrance fees and ticket sales for the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance. Last year the event raised $544,720 for local charities.

Concours co-chairman an international ambassador for the event

By TAMMI [illegible]

SANDRA KASKY, lifelong automotive enthusiast and dedicated executive director of the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance for the past [illegible] years, has been named co-chairman of the world's premier automotive event for classic cars.

Kasky will share chairmanship duties with current Concours Chairman Glenn Mounger.

Both Mounger and chairman emeritus of the Concours, Jules Heumann, praised Kasky's accomplishments as executive director and agreed that the co-chairmanship is well deserved.

"In a way it kind of means I know what I'm doing with the rest of my life," Kasky said. "It's a reflection of my commitment to the hobby and the Pebble Beach Concours in particular."

Sandra Kasky

In the last year, Kasky has also been an ambassador for the Concours, participating in no fewer than three 1,000-mile rallies, including the famous Mille Miglia, the Hispano Suiza International Tour and the Classic Car Club Caravans.

For the Hispano Suiza International Tour, Kasky borrowed Heumann's 1922 Labourdette Skiff, which won best of show in the 1972 Concours. "I was the only gal driving," Kasky said.

In the Classic Car Club Caravan, which weaves its way through the beautiful countryside of Oregon and California, Kasky drove Mounger's 1937 supercharged Cord.

Then in the celebrated Mille Miglia — the 1,000-mile rally through Italy, beginning in Brescia and making its way to Rome and back through the Italian countryside — Kasky drove a support car for the race.

The Mille Miglia is a special rally in that it brings back to life the "grande dame" of auto racing, first held in Italy in 1921 as an endurance test for cars along the sometime-primitive roads of rural Italy. The original Mille Miglia competitive event was abruptly canceled in 1957 after a tragic accident — the cars had gotten too fast for ordinary streets and highways. But the event lives on today in a more genteel fashion, as a tribute to the original.

Kasky explained that participants in the modern Mille Miglia have to drive cars which could have participated in the original races.

Though Kasky has been delighted to take part in these fabulous events, she's never lost sight of the fact that she's out there to represent the Concours.

"It's a nice way to meet people who love cars and talk about our event. Because the Concours d'Elegance benefits charity and we don't pay people to bring their cars, I'm always out there talking about Pebble Beach and getting folks interested in coming out," Kasky said.

The co-chairmanship of the Concours is a dream job for Kasky not only because of her passion for cars, but because of all the money raised for local charities. "I'm really happy we're able to raise over a half-million a year and it all stays in the community," she said.

During her many years with the Concours, Kasky has witnessed some incredible moments. "Most of my favorite moments involve the people who were so important to the cars and getting them back together with the cars they created," she said.

One such "stunning moment" occurred when designer Nuccio Bertone stood on the ramp with three Alfa Romeo BATS (Berlina Aerodynamica Tecnica) he created years before.

Or when designer Sergio Scaglietti was here with his cars and getting the "adoration from the people for what he created."

"And the first time Ralph Lauren won was quite a moment," Kasky said. "Even though he's done so much in his life he was thrilled to pieces. To see that in someone who could do most anything was quite exciting."

Kasky has had a love for cars for as long as she can remember.

"Growing up, I couldn't wait to have my own car," she said. "I started out with a 1965 Mustang. And I had a Fairlady Roadster. I always had a passion, but not always the pocketbook to go with it."

Her latest acquisition is a 1955 Cadillac Eldorado Special Sport Convertible — which has been featured in exhibits at the Blackhawk Museum and the Imperial Palace Collection in Las Vegas.

Kasky is thrilled about the cars that will be featured in this year's Concours. "We have 200 incredible cars coming," she said. "Mercedes Benz is flying over some imported Maybach cars for us and introducing a new Maybach, a beautiful sedan.

In addition, in celebration of the 100th year anniversary of Cadillac, many classes of Cadillac will be on display, including the 1904 model, which only has one cylinder.

As co-chairman, Kasky will continue to administer event logistics, day-to-day business and charity functions, and the selection of the Concours' honorary judges. Mounger will continue to supervise the car selection committee.

For Kasky, the thrill of the Concours goes far beyon the sleek designs and fine-tuned engines.

"If you want to reenact a wonderful time in history when people went on drives in the country and had picnics — it was a more genteel era," she explained. "And the people taking care of that part of history — the car people — are the best."

"The car is so powerful, when you come to a stop sign, it's like you're on a race horse," Kasky said of the 1922 Hispano-Sui she drove last year. Other differences with modern cars? "You have to double clutch, and the steering wheel has controls adjust the fuel-air mixture and the ignition timing. Also, you have to plan when you're going to stop.!"

Fiat's 8V sports cars celebrate 50th anniversary

AS PART OF the Fiat 8V's 50th anniversary celebration, a selection of 8V coupes and convertibles will be honored with a special display and specially-judged class during the annual Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance weekend.

Examples like the 1954 Fiat 8V Vignale coupe and convertible versions shown here, (designed by the Turin-based styling house of Carrozzeria Vignale), were hailed as some of the decade's most spectacular designs. Today, these little gems, while overlooked by many automotive aficionados, contain a number of advanced mechanical and technological innovations and are considered some of the most avant garde Grand Touring autos Italy ever produced.

These remarkable cars with their powerful eight-cylinder engines received their rather unusual "Fiat 8V" (or Otto Vu) name, instead of the more traditional "Fiat V8" moniker because Fiat thought that the Ford Motor Company had already established a trademark on the "V8" name. So to avoid that pitfall, Fiat called its new car the 8V.

The chassis from a 1940 Bugatti Type 64

The beauty of a car's insides

IS BEAUTY only skin deep?

Not where some cars are concerned. And to prove it, this year's Concours d'Elegance will feature its first-ever Chassis Class.

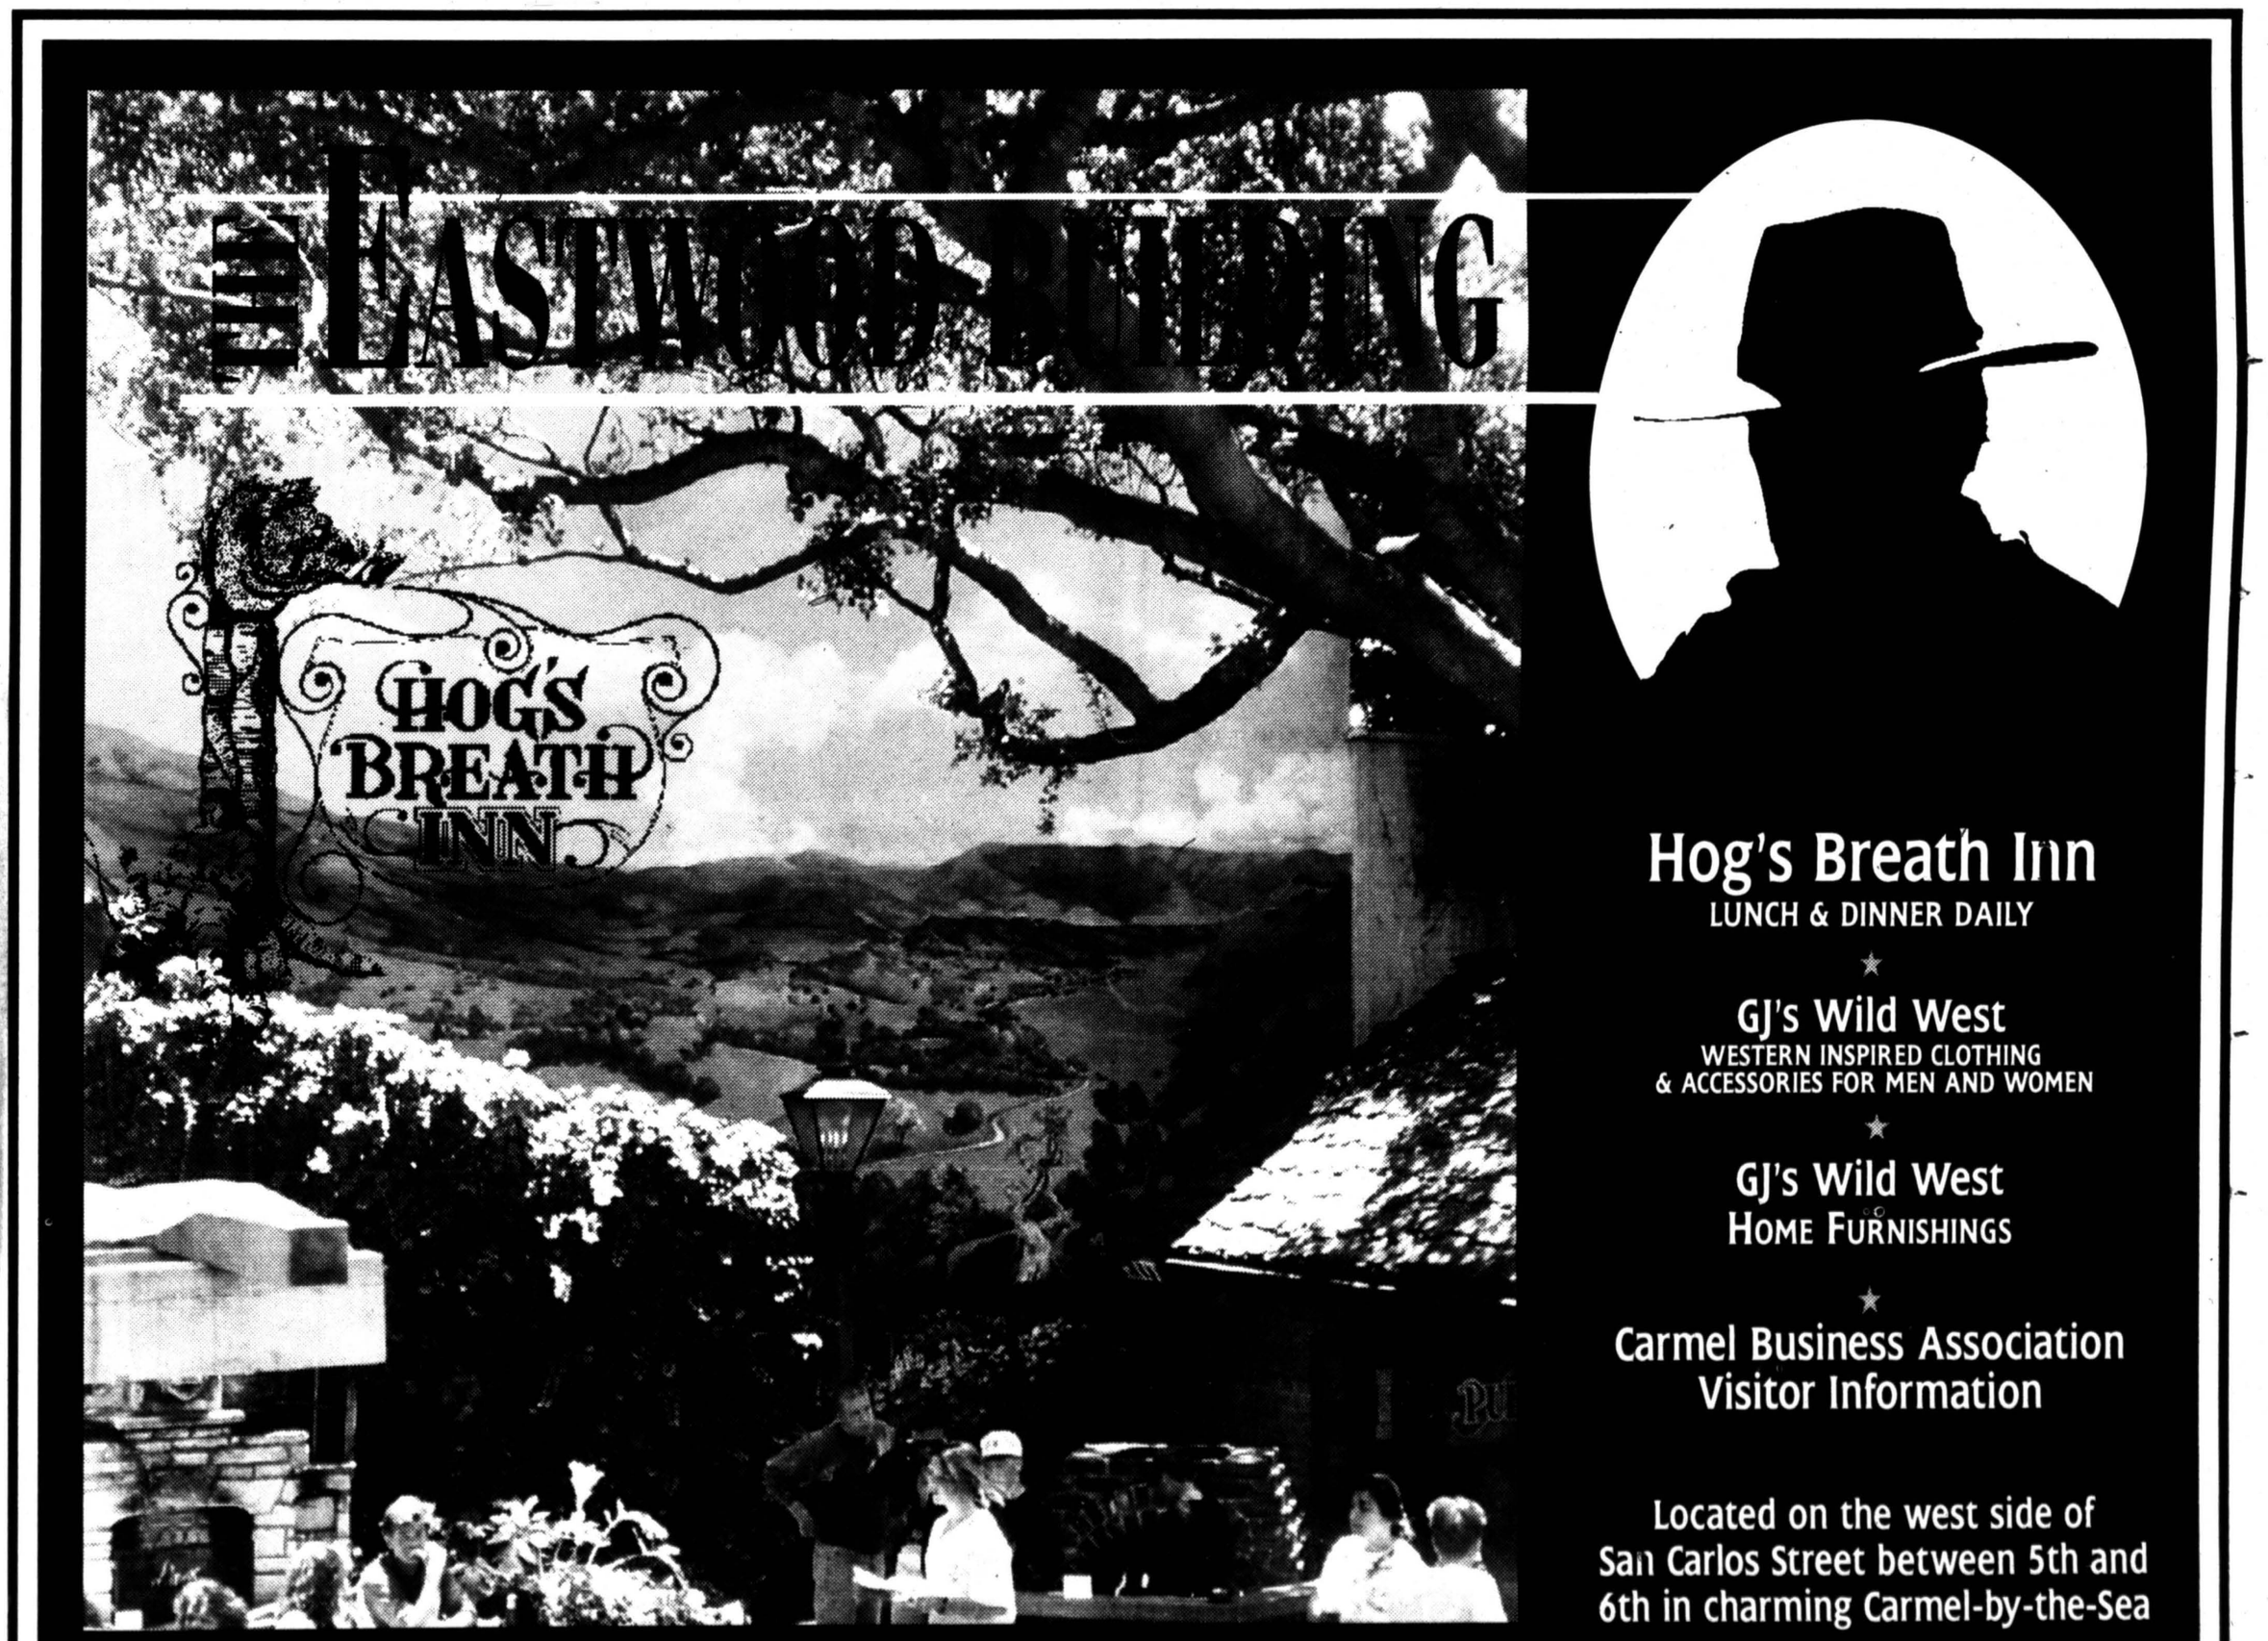
In contrast to the usual display of polished chrome, gleaming paint and sumptuous leather, this ground-breaking new class will feature a selection of exquisite auto chassis shown with no car body attached, and will include a wide variety of examples from well-known to obscure marques.

"The chassis is truly the heart of the car," says Glenn Mounger, co-chairman of the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance. "It's through its chassis that the internal history of a vehicle is uncovered. By exhibiting cars in a 'bare bones' format, people will be able to appreciate the intricacies, technology and design of these extraordinary classic vehicles."

Approximately 15 chassis are expected to be displayed in the inaugural Chassis Class, which will be exhibited in an area near the water's edge on the 18th Fairway at Pebble Beach. Informative field signs will explain the particulars of each chassis and describe the types of auto bodies in which a particular chassis might be found.

Chassis expected include examples from well-known classic marques like Rolls-Royce and Duesenberg, as well as a few less familiar names. One show-stopping example expected is a chassis from an Owen Magnetic, one of the curious models manufactured by E.H. Owen in Kensington, West London, England from 1899 to 1935.

A special display of Fiat 8V sports cars — to celebrate the car's 50th anniversary — will be part of the the 52nd Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance Aug. 18.



2002 Concours d'Elegance spotlights cars of Wilhelm Maybach and Cadillac

MAYBACH AND Cadillac are the honored marques for the 52nd annual Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance, which will take place on the emerald-green 18th Fairway of the Pebble Beach Golf Links on Sunday, Aug. 18.

Maybach will be honored with a gathering of significant vehicles and Cadillac will celebrate its centennial in 2002 at America's premier automotive event for classic cars, which showcases some of the finest and most unique collector cars from around the world.

Wilhelm Maybach was a contemporary of Gottlieb Daimler and considered one of the most talented of the early automotive designers. He had great influence on the early development of the motor car, and produced a series of luxury motorcars unmatched for power, innovation and design.

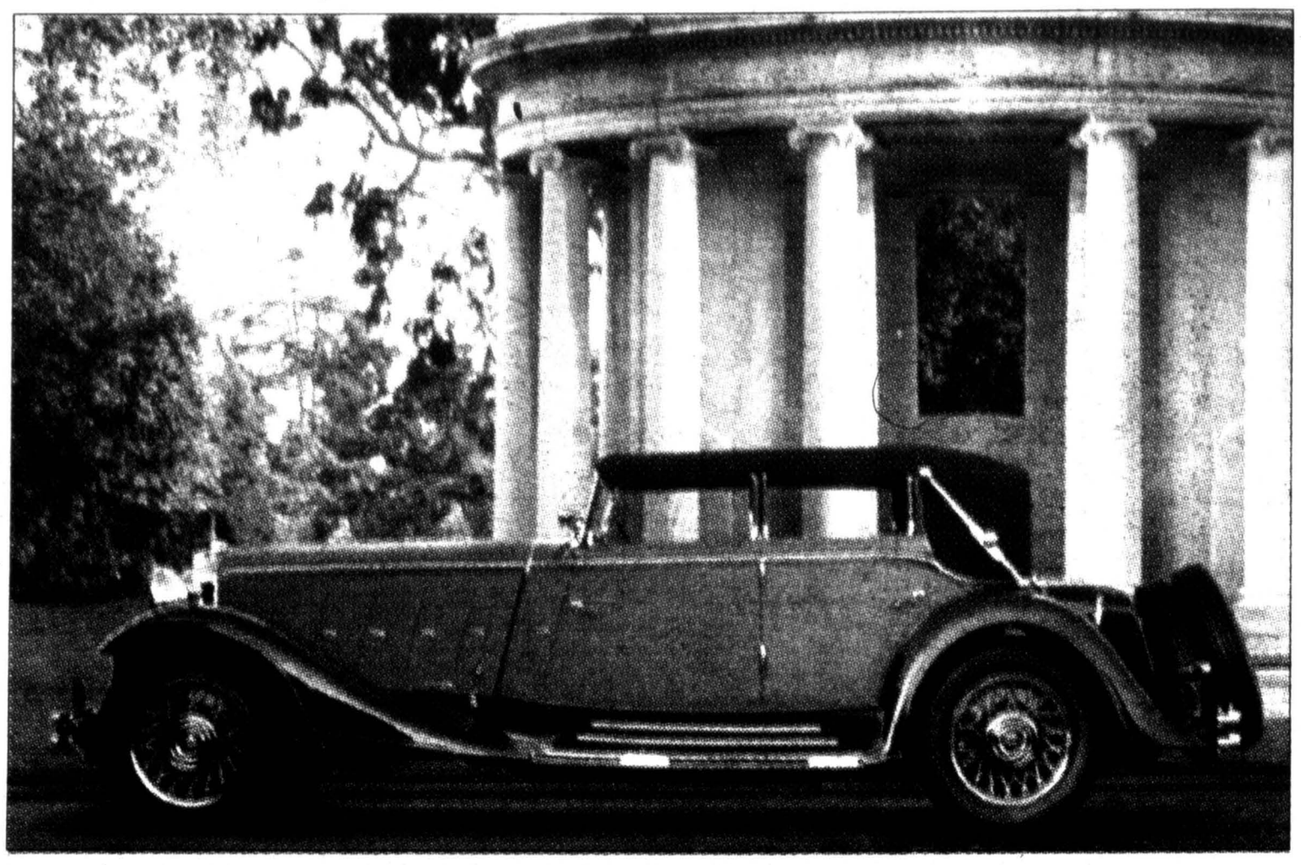
Cadillac will present a dynamic retrospective of its renowned and revolutionary vehicles. Founded by wealthy lumber merchant William H. Murphy, he named his fledgling auto company after the founder of the city of Detroit — Antoine de la Mothe Cadillac. The marque lead the way in engineering and manufacturing innovation, even in its earliest days, winning two DeWar Trophies (in 1908 and 1912) for the greatest technical advancements and becoming the leading component of William Durant's General Motors Company.

Additional display classes in 2002 will feature:

■ Custom-bodied Fiat V8s, including Zagatos and Ghia designed models

■ A Chassis Class featuring a wide range of pre-war chassis, showcasing some of the best examples of this genre, which reflect "the true heart of the car."

Tickets for the weekend event are $100, with children under 12 admitted free of charge. Tickets may only be purchased in advance of the event. Each ticket includes a program, parking and a shuttle ride to the show field. To order, call the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance ticket line at (877) 693-0009.



Among the cars featured at this year's Concours d Elegance will be this 1932 Maybach Zeppelin DS 8 (right), which boasts an 8-liter, V-12 engine with 200 hp, plus a Doppelschnellgang transmission with eight forward gears that help propel the car at up to 120 mph! Also on display will be a Cadillac 1931 Duel-Windshield Sport Phaeton (below).

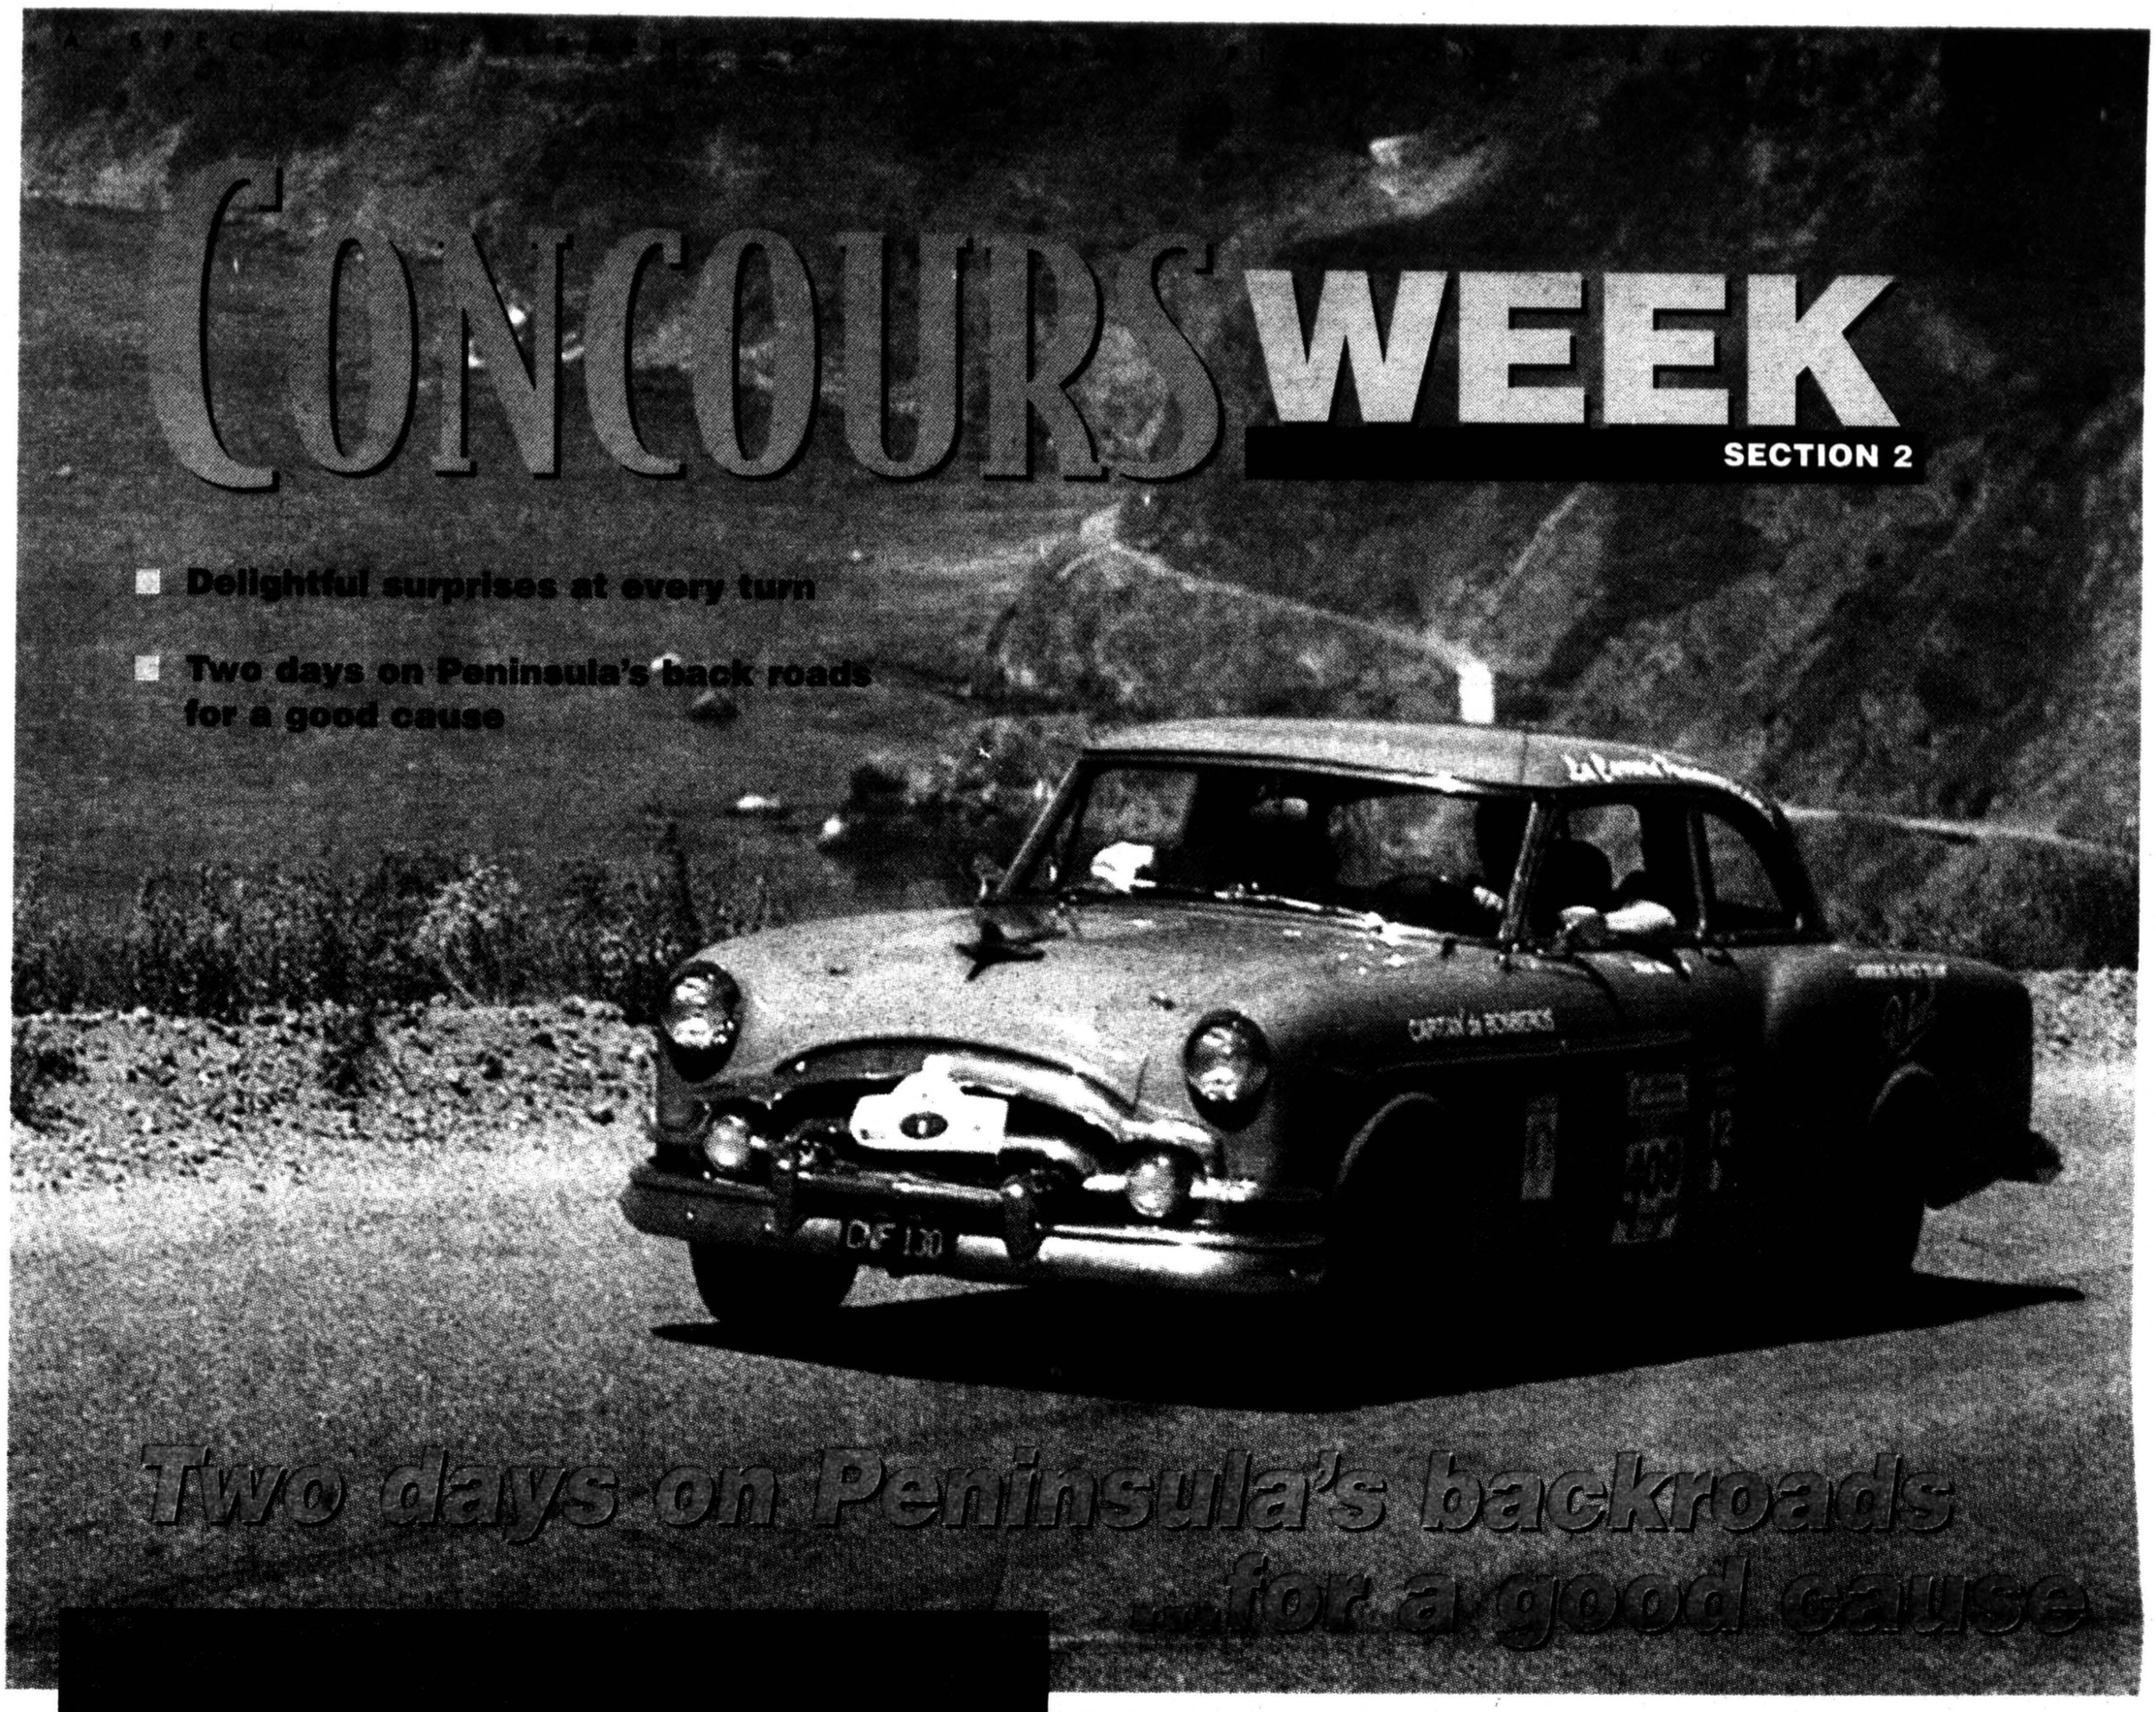
CONCOURS WEEK

SECTION 2

- Delightful surprises at every turn
- Two days on Peninsula's back roads for a good cause



Two days on Peninsula's backroads ...for a good cause

By MARY BROWNFIELD

CHARITY ABOUNDS during the vintage car weekend on the Monterey Peninsula — the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance, the Sports Car Racing Association of the Monterey Peninsula, Concorso Italiano and others benefit numerous nonprofits — but a few dozen well-heeled car enthusiasts have brought playing for a good cause to a whole new level.

Enter the annual Peninsula Rally, organized by Quail Lodge VP Lawson Little and Bonnie Van Hise, who handles public relations for Quail and Bernardus. Drivers and passengers cover hundreds of miles while enjoying the best Monterey County roads, scenery, activities, food and wine.

"It's good friends, good food and a good drive for a good cause," Little said.

Begun in 1998, the two-day event is a way to raise money while showing car buffs and their families what can be found off the beaten path throughout Monterey County. It always leads up to the historic car weekend.

"People travel from all over the world to come to this fabulous car week, and we wanted to give the families additional reasons to see the beautiful Monterey Peninsula and Monterey County," Little said. "We thought a car rally would be the best way to take them from the cities and show them country that really only locals know about."

The exact routes and destinations remain a mystery up until the moment everyone gathers to hit the road. The passenger in each vehicle becomes the official navigator by receiving a 50-page route book which describes not only where to head at every turn, but what notable sights they should see along the way. The routes are often sprinkled with clever surprises, like helpers waiting alongside a hot, twisty road to refresh drivers and passengers with cold bottles of water, frozen grapes, wet towels and other "survival kit" treats.

Past rallies featured laps around Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca, a visit to Gizdich Ranch, go-kart racing at Marina Municipal Airport and partaking of Bonny Doon's bounties.

The 2002 rally undertook a Peninsula tour Aug. 13 and a coastal tour the following day, with treks along phenomenal roads like 17 Mile Drive (as well as the old Pebble Beach Road Race course), the entire length of Carmel Valley Road, Los Laureles Grade, Highway 1 through Big Sur and Nacimiento-Fergusson Road.

The plans also called for out-of-car excursions, such as a lap around Lake El Estero in the resident glittery paddle boats, lunch with top brass at the Naval Postgraduate School, a tour of a missile carrier anchored in the bay and a walk through Mission San Antonio.

Bernardus owner Ben Pon and Michael Kadoorie, chairman of the board of Hong Kong & Shanghai Hotels, Ltd. (which owns Quail Lodge), are key participants and hosts, and both institutions contribute greatly to the rally, especially in the food and wine categories. Quail Lodge typically hosts breakfast each day and serves as the starting point for the drives. Bernardus — both the lodge and the winery — stepped up to host this year's dinners, auctions and tongue-in-cheek award ceremonies.

'We don't have a rigid rule [about what cars can participate]. We are more relaxed in that because it's more about good food, good friends, good camaraderie — and you have to have the philanthropic spirit, the willingness to give.'

The festivities weren't to end until all arrived at a private Peninsula party where drivers could step out of their own machines to meander among and admire other collectors' cherished treasures.

"Every year it's different," Little said, adding that he savors the challenge of keeping the rally new and fresh, especially for those who return year after year.

A far-from-motley crew

Although the Peninsula Rally is vintage-car centered, the criteria for signing up are somewhat loose. The result is a collection of vehicles as eclectic as each day's activities.

"It should be pre-1974 and something you deem as special," Little said. The list of 32 cars registered for the 2002 rally ran the gamut: A 1931 Fiat, a pair of 1932 Alfa Romeos, a 1970 Datsun 240 Z and a 1966 VW Transporter. Then there were the 1957 Ferrari 250 GT, a 2002 Ferrari 360 F1 Spider, 1950s-era Austin Healeys and a 1997 Dodge Viper. Several Porsches, Mercedes, Jaguars — and even an Iso Bizzarini and a Morgan Plus 8 — also made the 2002 list, as did a couple of classic Corvettes.

"We don't have a rigid rule," he continued. "We are more relaxed in that because it's more about good food, good friends, good camaraderie — and you have to have the philanthropic spirit, the willingness to give."

And give they do. In addition to paying an "appropriate" fee to participate in the rally (last year's charge was $1,500 per car), drivers and passengers also bid on auction items and make donations. Several corporate sponsors pitch in for charities by giving cash or goods and services.

Last year, the small group raised $28,000 for the Make-a-Wish Foundation and $14,000 for the American Red Cross.

This year's efforts are benefiting the Kinship Center, the Naval Postgraduate School Foundation and the California Highway Patrol's 11-99 Foundation, which aids the families of officers killed in the line of duty.

Now in its fifth year, the Peninsula Rally has gathered an extensive list of sponsors, including Exxon Mobile, Wells Fargo, Bonhams Auctioneers, McCall Motorsports, Bernardus Lodge, the NPS Foundation, Quail Lodge Resort and Golf Club and Chopard.

Bentley, a contributing sponsor, loans the rally a brand new car each year — either for workers like Lawson to drive to ensure all runs smoothly or to carry VIPs.

"We are not necessarily driving every mile," Little said. "We'll launch them, and then run to a stop ahead — we're always chasing it or running ahead of it."

And while the rally started with just a handful of cars, it's grown so much that Little now keeps a waiting list and has had to turn people away.

"It's an eclectic group — we get a little bit of everybody — and after they're all dialed up and ready, it's really a kick," he said. "It's a great thing that the formula came together and we can cut a nice check to impact something local. That's the neat thing."

A mammoth white tent will be turned into an elegant art gallery during the Concours d'Elegance, showing paintings and sculptures by members of the Automotive Fine Arts Society, and will be open to Concours ticket holders commencing Sunday, Aug. 18.

AFAS president Ken Eberts said the guest list to the pre-opening gathering includes many celebrities and dign: ...es from the automotive industry. "Guests will come from a wide variety of car aficionados, including famous classic car owners and world-class racecar drivers and collectors of automotive art," he said.

The AFAS premiere specifically showcases the most recent works created by AFAS artists whose works are sought by private and corporate collectors around the world, according to Eberts.

Lincoln and AFAS will jointly host the art exhibit. Eberts said this is the eighth year Lincoln has sponsored the AFAS show.

Each year, awards are given to honor the achievements of the pioneers in automotive fine art. This year's judges will include car collector William Davis, while the Lincoln Award will be presented by Brian Kelley, president of Lincoln Mercury. The award will go to the artist whose works have captured the vision of automotive design and passion, Eberts said.

This year, AFAS artist Bill Neale was commissioned by Lincoln to create the painting, "Lincoln Love Affair," featuring two 1940 Lincoln Continentals. The cars have been owned and maintained by their second owners since the 1950s. Neale's original painting will be raffled in a drawing at the cocktail party.

Established in 1983 by a group of critically acclaimed artists, AFAS is composed of members who work in many diverse mediums including oils, watercolors, acrylics, wood, gouache, pen and ink, clay, and metal. The society participates in select shows across the country, of which the Pebble Beach Concours is one, including the Amelia Island Concours d'Elegance.

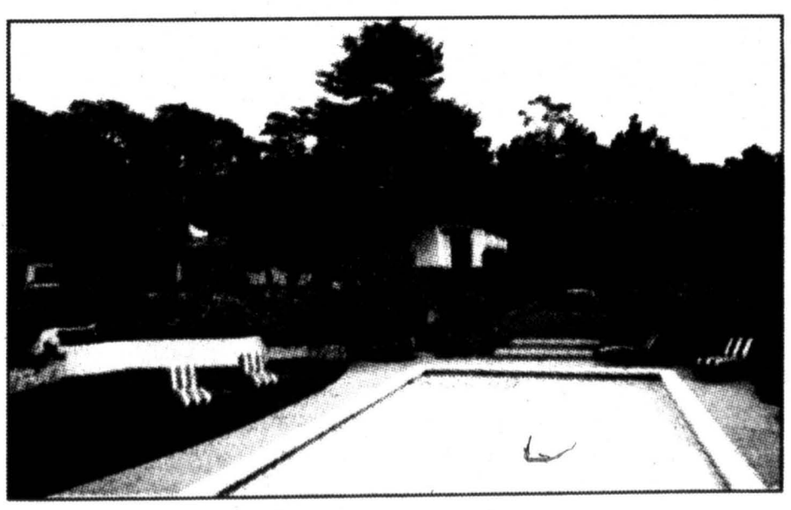
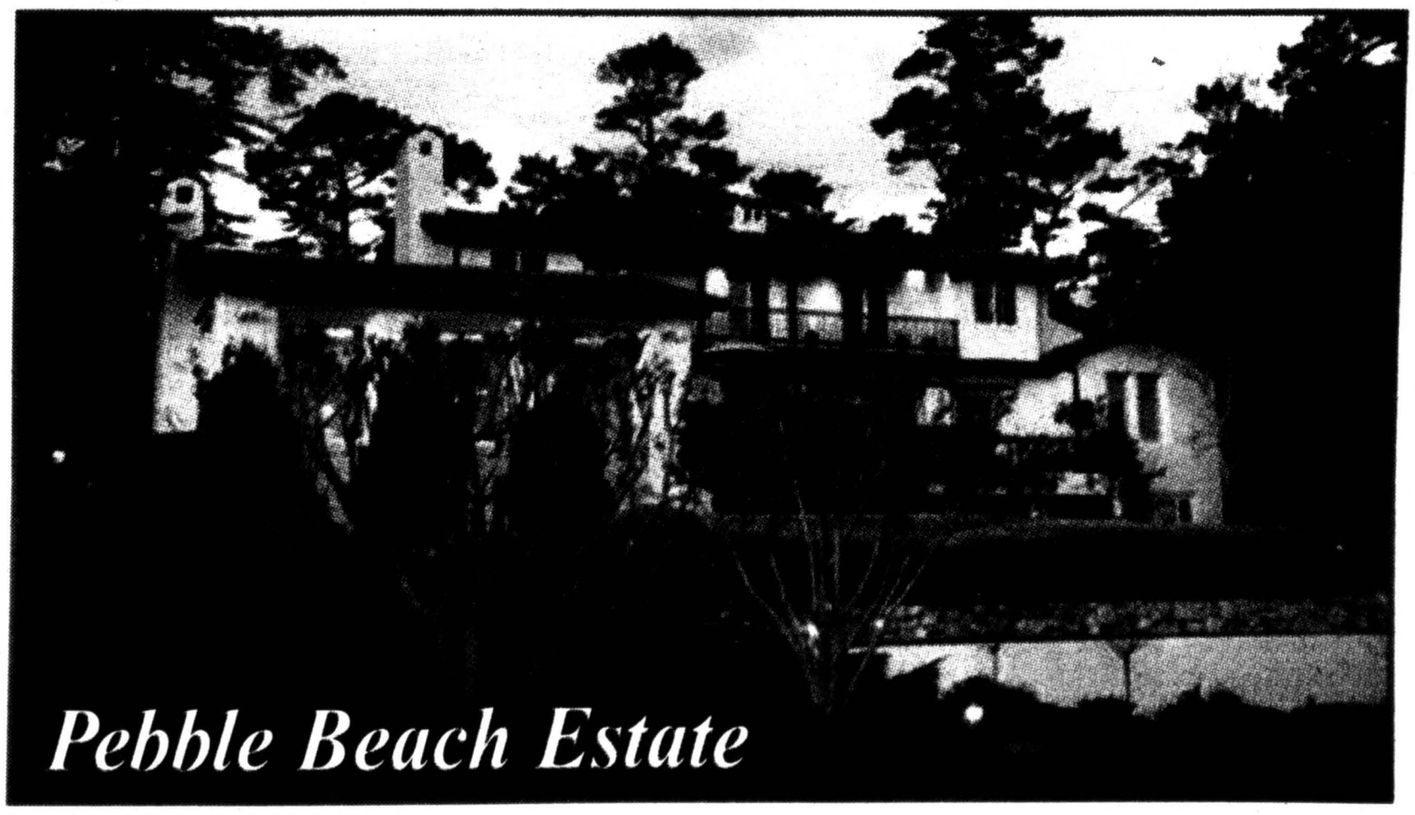
"On no other coast that I know shall you enjoy, in calm, sunny weather, such a spectacle of ocean greatness, such beauty of changing color and such a degree of thunder of sound."

— Robert Louis Stevenson





This magnificent, gated Mediterranean villa was created in 1929 to take full advantage of the spectacular views of Carmel Bay, Point Lobos and the Pacific. A masterful example of Spanish Mediterranean-inspired architecture, it was designed by Robert Stanton and authentically detailed. The six bedroom, seven plus bath home is distinguished by a creamy stucco façade, a gorgeously weathered tile roof and a classical Carmel stone interior courtyard. The well-proportioned rooms are bathed in sunshine, opening to the intimate courtyard and offering breathtaking views of the Pacific. The main rooms feature soaring cathedral ceilings with massive, exposed beams, giving a grand, yet warmly intimate feeling. The interior features thick plaster walls, tall, sunny French doors and, of course, a state-of-the-art family kitchen—all brilliantly designed for private living and gracious entertaining.

Prestigiously located in a private park-like setting above the world famous 17 Mile Drive, this estate is entered through elegant gates and approached by a wooded drive among great old oaks and Monterey pines. From the sweeping circular drive, one is struck both by the character of this exquisite villa and the luxurious landscape. The secluded grounds include two and one-half terraced acres surrounded by wonderful, mature oaks, extensive plantings of cypress and holly, formal boxwood gardens and flower beds, climbing roses entwining the balconies, a pool and spa, and even a putting green — all overlooking the dazzling Pacific and the famous fiery sunsets from Pebble Beach. The character, serenity and privacy of this exquisite estate are simply incomparable. $19,900,000

Ken Eberts gives inside tips on buying automotive fine art

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

IF YOU are a collector of fine museum-quality automotive art, or would like to become one, you should know that selecting pieces for investment requires some inside knowledge.

Not the insider trading type of knowledge. But like any time you invest a substantial sum, it's important to understand what to look for before making a purchase, advises AFAS president Ken Eberts.

Here are some tips from the president of the Automotive Fine Art Society:

Select artwork you like: Look for art in a style you like that evokes a fond memory of your first car, a race you attended, a place you visited, etc. You should enjoy looking at the work every day.

Purchase works by recognized artists: Make educated selections by studying the history and names associated with automotive fine art. This category of art has a hierarchy of recognized masters.

Automotive and art publications are a good source of information: These are reliable resources for learning more about art investments and terminology.

Attend exhibitions and displays: More and more exhibits and museums are including automotive fine

Ferrari Testa Rossa

AFAS artist Bill Neale captures David Love and his Ferrari Testa Rossa in watercolor

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

"DAVID LOVE is the epitome of the gentleman racer," Automotive Fine Arts Society artist Bill Neale feels, and he has paid a tribute to the racer and his 250 Ferrari Testa Rossa in a watercolor painting, "Testa Rossa #9."

Neale will unveil his salute to the car and its driver at the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance on Sunday, Aug. 18 at the AFAS art show on the 18th Fairway.

The 17-by-28-inch painting captures the famous car-and-driver combination barreling through the Laguna Seca Raceway during the 2001 Monterey Historic Automobile Races. "Not only is Love one of the most successful drivers on the West Coast, he's one of the most popular," Neale said. "As owner, driver and mechanic, Love has successfully campaigned a fabulous Ferrari for decades at almost every vintage race in the U.S., including the Monterey Historics since 1974."

The painting features a frontal view of Love charging his 1950s 250 Testa Rossa on the celebrated track. The watercolor captures the blood red Ferrari roaring underneath a blue California sky.

Neale said, "I had the good fortune to ride with David in his famous #9 several times. It's pleasing to see such a wonderful car driven on the street and track each year, instead of being relegated to a museum."

Driving in style — the easy way

By TAMARA GRIPPI

IF YOU want to arrive at the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance in style, but don't exactly have a Jaguar or a vintage Mercedes in your garage, there are a couple of local businesses that specialize in renting one of those beauties for the day.

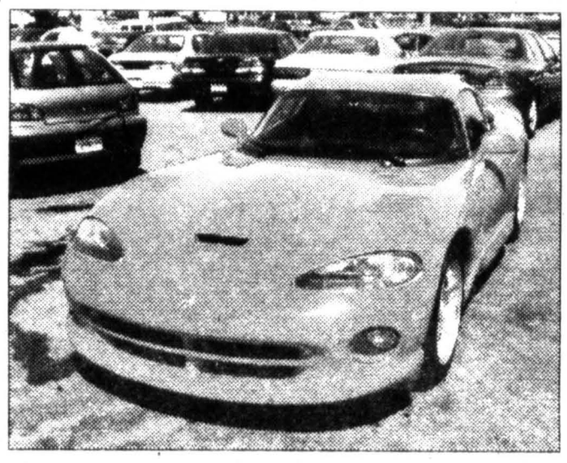
Carmel Cruisers rents a variety of high-end and exotic cars — including the Dodge Viper, Plymouth Prowler, Jaguar XK8 and a Porsche 996 coup, to name a few.

Car enthusiasts Earl MacDonald and William Kirkwood started Carmel Cruisers a little more than a year ago. "We had the bad luck of starting before Sept. 11 but we managed to come through it," MacDonald said.

Carmel Cruisers is busiest during major car events and is already booked for this year's Concours. While much of the business comes from visitors staying at The Lodge at Pebble Beach, the Inn at Spanish Bay and Bernardus Lodge, locals are starting to find out about it.

"It's the prefect outlet for car enthusiasts to rent a car for a day," MacDonald said. "The Dodge Viper costs $80,000, but you can rent it for $475 a day."

If you're interested in driving around in style when Cherry's Jubilee comes along next fall, you might want to make a reservation now. To contact Carmel Cruisers call 375-2784 or visit the website at www.carmelcruisers.com.



You won't need to take out a second mortgage to drive a Dodge Viper for the day.

The vintage look

Classic car enthusiasts who don't have a collection of their own can cruise around in reproductions of vintage convertibles provided by Rent-a-Roadster in Monterey.

A jaunt in Rent-a-Roadster cars — including the 1929 Model A Roadster, Mercedes SSK and the Ford Phaeton — gives drivers the carefree pleasure of stylish driving without the collector's anxiety.

Rent-a-Roadster's convertibles are available for an hour, afternoon or all day. To contact the office call 647-1929, visit the website at www.rent-a-roadster.com or come by the office at 229 Cannery Row.

Whether you're looking to drive around in classic style or on the cutting age, the options are out there.

Why become involved in automotive fine art?

Automotive fine art is emerging as one of the most important forms of artistic expression. With this growing popularity, we have seen interest rise dramatically in displaying pieces in private collections, boardrooms and homes.

Critics agree that members of the Automotive Fine Arts Society are among the best in their field. That's why TimePiece Public Relations is proud to represent this prestigious organization. Based on our experience working with motorsports, aviation, technology and manufacturing clients, we know how to "spot a winner."

We invite you to visit the AFAS* exhibit at the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance this weekend and see why trendsetters are snapping up automotive fine art by:

For Laguna Seca general manager, working in motorsports world means coming home

By MARY BROWNFIELD

GILL CAMPBELL was born into the auto industry, and as a little girl she never knew what she wanted to be when she grew up. Now, as Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca's general manager, she has found out.

"If any children haven't made their minds up, being a motorsports promoter covers it all," said Campbell, who first arrived on the job in January on a temporary basis but ended up working through the year and intends to stay. "I never knew I would be a firefighter, a nurse, a promoter, an advertising agent..."

Although her family sold Morris Minors in their hometown of Exeter, England, and two of her brothers raced, Campbell opted out of the automotive world and became a school teacher.

"I taught history and drama, both of which come into play in what I do now," she said. As general manager of Laguna Seca, Campbell oversees all the operations at the track, from getting contracts signed to making sure financing is lined up for the track's $50 million renovation.

Campbell got into coordinating motorsports events and eventually started her own company after leaving England for Eugene, Ore., where she intended to go to graduate school in 1975 but ended up managing restaurants instead.

She was hired by Portland-based Global Events Group in 1989 and found herself promoting the city's historic races, grand prix and other racing events.

"That's what led me back to the world of motorsports," she said. "It was then that I recognized I was home."

Campbell remembered her first visit to Laguna Seca in 1990, when Global sent her south to handle on-site operations and registration for the Laguna Seca Grand Prix.

Gill Campbell

"I was told I would have to work alongside a SCRAMP person and my response was, 'Why? That's what I do,'" Campbell said. "It turned out her response was the same."

Sitting next to her Sports Car Racing Association of the Monterey Peninsula counterpart, Campbell felt some territorial tension brewing.

"And then some obnoxious guy came over to the table, and we both reacted in same way: We lunged across the table to cut his wristband off," she said. The misbehaving man lost his race credentials that weekend.

The like-minded SCRAMP director was none other than Kathy Hayworth, now president of SCRAMP's board of directors and one of many who works closely with Campbell.

"The relationship I have with the staff at the raceway developed to where Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca kind of became a second home," she said.

'They tell me there's a beach here, and an ocean, and sunsets. But I haven't seen them.'

— Gill Campbell

And when Laguna Seca management found itself in need of a new GM, Campbell was called to see if she was interested. She started work as an interim Jan. 7, and her first order of business was to solidify the 2002 lineup.

"We had no contracts in place when I got here," she said.

She particularly took great joy in handing a signed contract to Steve Earle, founder of what is now called the Rolex Monterey Historic Automobile Races. Campbell has known Earle for years — her company handled hospitality and operations for his events.

While working as Laguna Seca's GM, Campbell had also been running her Portland-based business, Campbell Productions & PR, LLC. She makes her Peninsula home in Del Rey Oaks — perfectly situated between the track and the airport.

"They tell me there's a beach here, and an ocean, and sunsets," she said. "But I haven't seen them."

Recently making the transition from principal to consultant for Campbell Productions, Campbell has turned her attention to ensuring the success of a racetrack in the midst of a $70 million renovation project while facing stiffer competition for the entertainment dollar.

In addition to establishing the SCRAMP Foundation to help raise $7 million for the next phase of track improvements, Campbell wants to help people learn more about Laguna Seca and its contributions.

"We need to put a face on the racetrack," she said. "I need to get into the community as much as I can and educate people about who we are."

In addition to being a world-famous racing venue, Laguna Seca hosts numerous other local events and each year contributes a half million dollars to local organizations through SCRAMP.

To pull off each of its five large motorsports events every year, SCRAMP's 25 board members and 200 assistant directors organize about 2,500 volunteers to help with everything from ticket taking to directing cars in the parking lots. Those volunteer hours translate to donations from SCRAMP to numerous charities, and the nonprofit has distributed more than $10 million to local organizations over the years.

Campbell can barely contain her excitement about her future at the track.

"It's the absolute dream job for anyone with a passion for motorsports — and my office overlooks the racetrack," she said. "I'm the first to brag about my job, because I'm really looking forward to the next few years." ✪

Is your neighbor a racecar driver?

WHEN MORE than 60,000 car enthusiasts and racing legends gather to enjoy the throaty bellow of race cars revving their engines at the 29th annual Rolex Monterey Historic Automobile Races Aug. 16-18 at Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca, several Carmel residents will be more than spectators.

They will be driving their historic motorcars through the famed Corkscrew and challenging the 11-turn road course to relive motorsports' bygone era.

Among Carmel residents participating during the world's premier motoring weekend are:

Mac Archer, driving a 1965 Cobra 427;

Jimmy Domingos, driving a 1960 Cooper T-52 F-Jr.;

Terry McHenry, driving a 1963 Corvette Stingray;

Pat Phinny, driving a 1930 Ford Gilmore Indy Special; and Max Jamiesson, driving a 1959 Abarth Zagato.

This year, Rolex Monterey Historic Automobile Races, presented by Dodge, pays homage to American sports car icon — Corvette — as part of the marque's 50th anniversary celebration. In all, more almost 400 historic race and sports cars will heat up the track during 14 separate races throughout the weekend. Nearly every type of car ever to race will be seen, from a rare 1913 DeHal to the powerful 1981 Ferrari 512s and rumbling historic Trans-Am cars.

"The drivers of these old sports cars and racecars not only enjoy the competition on the track, but also in sharing their love of these vehicles with others," said Steven Earle, president of General Racing Ltd., and founder of the Monterey historic races.

Admission to the Monterey Historic Automobile Races is $35 on Friday; $55 on Saturday; $45 on Sunday; $80 Saturday and Sunday; and $90 for a three-day pass.

To learn more about the races, log on to www.montereyhistoric.com or www.laguna-seca.com, or call (800) 327-SECA.

You won't find any "trailer queens" at the Rolex Monterey Historic Automobile Races, which showcase collector cars battling on the race track — just as their manufacturers intended. Carmelite Mac Archer (below) swept through half the field last year to take a close victory in his 1965 Cobra 427 called Old Bertha.

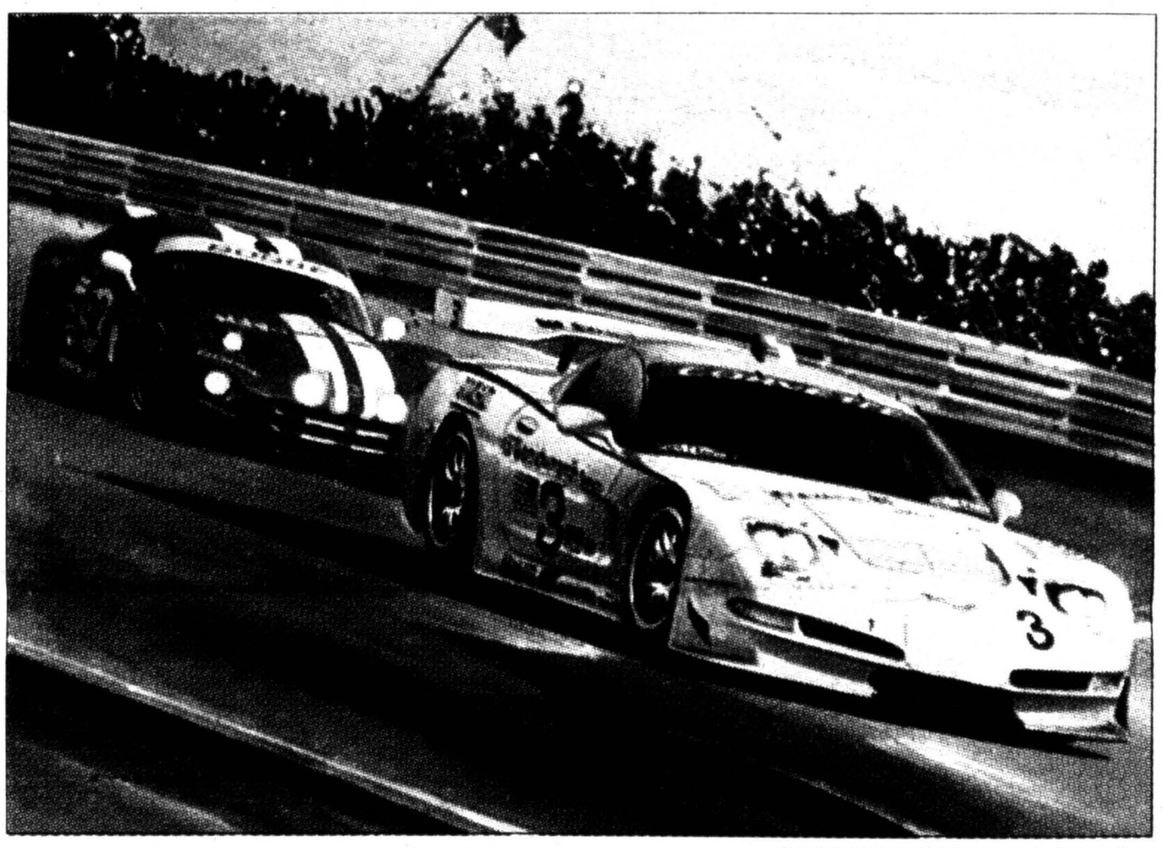
Corvette to celebrate 50th birthday at Seca

NO OTHER American sports car has exuded so much power, good looks and masculine style as the Chevrolet Corvette.

For 50 years Corvette has set the performance standard, whether it was on America's highways or competing on race courses around the world.

In what may be the largest gathering of Corvettes ever, thousands will roar into Monterey on Aug. 16 -18 to honor the sports car's enduring heritage at the world-renowned Rolex Monterey Historic Automobile Races held at Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca.

On the track, battling Camaro and Porsche . . .



and in the artist's eye, besting a Viper, the Chevrolet Corvette has proved its style and power over and over again since it was first produced by General Motors 50 years ago.

"The Corvette was popularized by two watershed events in 1960 — the debut of the "Route 66" television show and Briggs Cunningham's eighth place finish in the 24 Hours of Le Mans," said Monterey historic races founder Steve Earle. "The Corvette's dream car design, however, won people over long before that."

'The Corvette was popularized by two watershed events in 1960 — the debut of the "Route 66" television show and Briggs Cunningham's eighth place finish in the 24 Hours of Le Mans.'

— Steve Earle

The Monterey Historics, now in its 29th year, is considered the Super Bowl of historic automobile racing. Sports and race cars from nearly every era of motor racing are represented, and can include models as early as a 1911 Fiat GP to the blindingly fast 1983 Williams Formula One car.

The Monterey Historics' appeal also attracts some of the greatest drivers ever to turn a competitive wheel. Among the many legendary names of motorsports who are frequently seen reminiscing with fans or strapping themselves into a cockpit include Sir Stirling Moss, Carroll Shelby, Phil Hill, Sir Jack Brabham, Dan Gurney, George Follmer and Danny Sullivan. The list goes on and on and visitors never know who they may bump into while walking the open paddock and pits.

For the Chevrolet bow tie die-herds, though, the race they will be closely watching is the group that features their beloved Corvette, competing against its arch nemesis, the Ford-powered Shelby Cobra. Visitors will have the opportunity to watch the extremely rare high-performance Grand Sports compete, accompanied by Stingrays and a host of others that will make this year's Historics one to remember.

Clocked at 22.5 in a 12 mph zone, indignant Dunhill fought back

THE WATCH is intended to "rekindle the spirit of motoring" and pay tribute to "British victories in Le Mans."

But the dunhil' d-Type watch, featured this year by the British company during the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance, is most interesting for its link to the man who was possibly the first to fight a speeding ticket.

Alfred Dunhill inherited a successful London business from his father, Henry. In the 1880s, horse-drawn carriage omnibuses crowded the city's streets. Horse leathers, saddlery and accessories for carriages were among the items with which the young Alfred, at the age of 15, learned his trade.

By the time he took over the business in 1893, the motorcar had appeared.

Alfred Dunhill in his Daimler in the early 1900s. Dunhill, who turned his father's leather goods company into a specialist in motorcar accessories, was perhaps the first person to fight a speeding ticket. Like most modern motorists, he wasn't successful.

Soon, the law requiring that a man with a red flag walk in front of every motorized vehicle was repealed. In November 1895 the speed limit on British roads was raised from 4 to 12 miles per hour!

The motorcar became emancipated and the first London to Brighton rally celebrated this fact in the following year.

Alfred was quick to take up the challenge and soon transformed his father's original business in the horse-carriage trade to that of supplying motorcar accessories, capitalizing on the expertise and experience in leather working that had been built up by his father's company.

By 1897 he had started branding his company as "Dunhill's Motorities."

The Dunhill's Motorities business soon became integral to the needs of early motorcar drivers.

Alfred was able to supply everything that was required, from heavy, weatherproof leather coats to altitude meters to assist up and downhill motoring, from voltometers and clocks for the dashboard to horns of extraordinary shape and musical ability which could frighten off the sleepiest drivers of old-fashioned horses and carts.

See DUNHILL page 39C

'I was not in any way exceeding the speed limit'

Dear Sirs,

The following facts will no doubt be of interest to your readers as showing how absolutely impossible under existing circumstances it is to successfully defend an action for exceeding the speed limit.

I was summoned at Kingston-on-Thames for driving on the main Portsmouth road at Cobham at a speed in excess of the legal limit. The evidence produced was a police sergeant, who stated he had timed me over a measured 440 yards, that he had started his stop watch as I passed a post 434 yards away from him, and stopped it as I passed a post six yards beyond him, and that I had travelled the distance at the rate of 22 1. 2 miles per hour.

There was no corroborative evidence of any sort offered by the police as to the pace I was going. The sergeant admitted in cross-examination that I at once stated he had mad a mistake, and that I offered to take him over the instance without altering a lever on the car to prove my statement.

This he refused to do, saying it was not his duty. I then went over the distance myself, going at exactly the same speed as previously, and stopped in front of the sergeant, who said he wished I had gone six yards further, as then he could have taken the time, but as far as he could make out I had taken about twice as long as on the previous occasion.

I then went back to endeavor to obtain a witness who saw me going over the measured distance, and found a man, but he, although stating I was going very slowly and making some remarks about the police, refused to give his name and address, as it would damage him in his employment.

I then went back to the sergeant, and informed him the man refused to give his name and address, and asked him to go with me to obtain it, but he refused (as he admitted in court) because his tea was getting cold!

My solicitor, Mr. Douglass, endeavored to prove to the magistrate that the police evidence could not be relied upon, but the magistrate stopped him, saying that had nothing to do with this identical case, and practically stated that no evidence would be any good other than that of a man with a stop watch, as against the policeman's unsupported evidence, and his stop watch.

I may state that whilst covering the preceding mile I was warned of this identical trap by no less than four motor drivers and one cyclist. Consequently, I took extra precaution that I was not in any way exceeding the speed limit, and both myself and my driver went into the witness box and swore we were not exceeding eight miles per hour. Notwithstanding this, the magistrate fined me the sum of £1, stating I had exceeded the speed limit of twelve miles per hour.

In face of these facts, and seeing that the police sergeant refused to give me the least assistance in any way, shape, or form, I ask, what is a motorist to do when a policeman says he has exceeded the speed limit?

what's your nature?

Ancient Indian philosophies remind us that we, as individuals, are constantly changing. It's part of our nature. Changes that occur within and without—compelling us to try new things. Like our new directions in hair cut, color, styling and makeup! Try softer and looser—masses of curls, a rush of shimmering, tone-on-tone makeup. Or try wilder—choppy, razored haircuts, raw, unexpected makeup shades. Re-imagine yourself with Aveda.

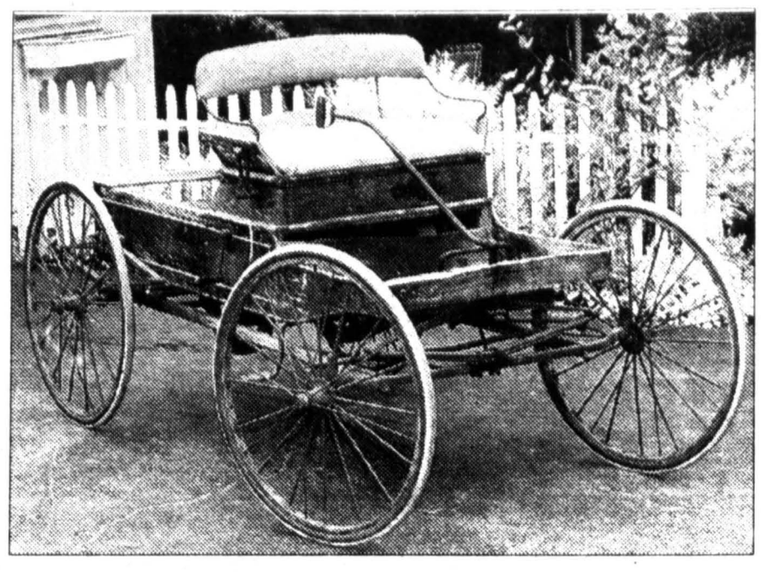
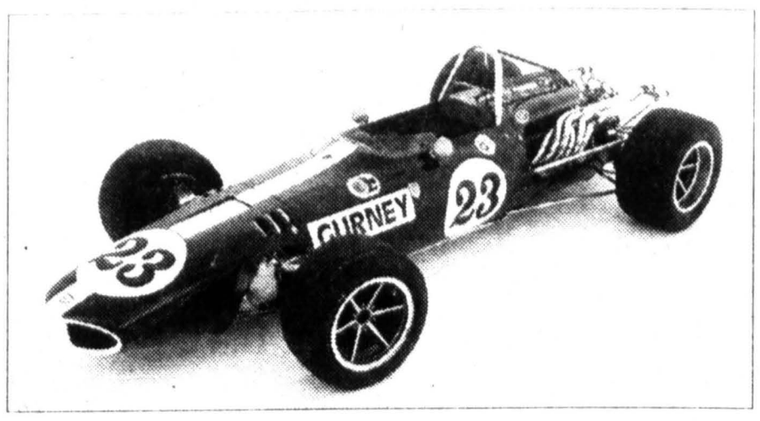
Christie's features Aston-Martin, Bugatti

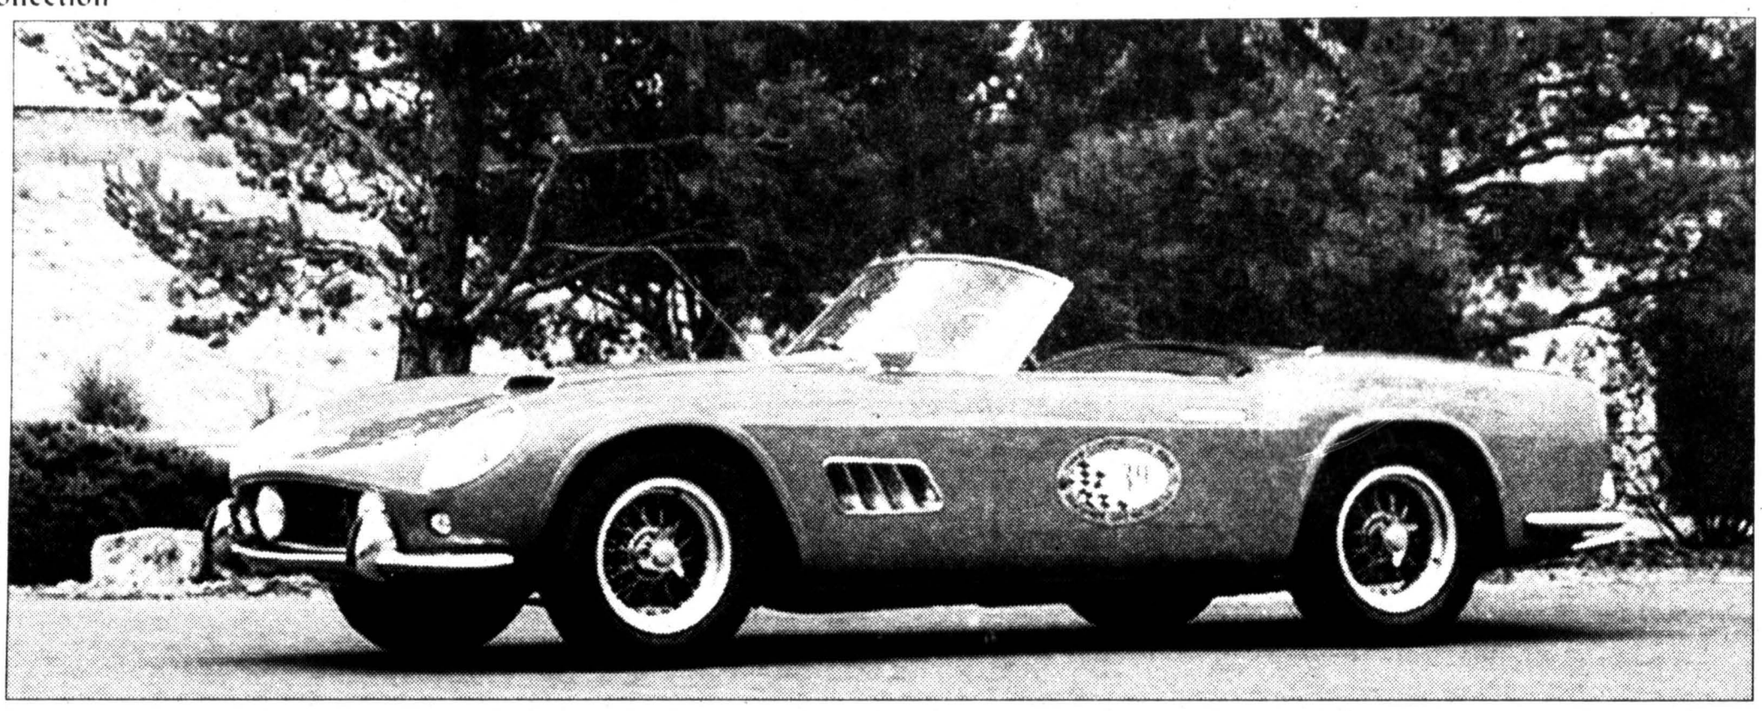
CHRISTIE'S INTERNATIONAL Motor Cars will offer a superb selection of rare and vintage automobiles at the firm's 13th annual sale of Exceptional Motor Cars in at the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center at 6 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 18.

Complementing the weekend of the 52nd Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance, Christie's will auction the magnificent 1914 Silver Ghost Skiff from the late Bob Barrymore Collection of Rolls Royce & Bentley, the 1931 Bugatti Grand Prix from the late Bill Serri Jr. Collection, as well as the "All-American Racers" 1966 Eagle-Weslake Formula 1 racecar. Further highlights include two stunning Aston Martins with excellent provenance and a celebrity-driven 1939 Lagonda Roadster.





An 1894 Duryea (left), a 1996 F1 Eagle-Westlake T1G (above) and a 1959 Ferrari (below) are highlights of the Christie's auction, which again this year closes out the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance weekend.



Property from the Bob Barrymore Collection of Rolls-Royce & Bentley

Christie's is pleased to offer the 10-car collection of the late Bob Barrymore, president of the Rolls-Royce Owners' Club from 1984-86. His collection, lead by the exquisite 1914 Rolls Royce Silver Ghost, reflects his discerning taste and love for the revered British marques of Rolls Royce and Bentley. The skiffbodied 1914 Silver Ghost, chassis 54PB (estimate: $500,000 - $700,000) displays the unique boattail coachwork by Schapiro-Schebera of Berlin. This amazing automobile was discovered unrestored in Egypt in the mid-1950s under the former ownership of King Faud's brother Muhammed. Through a chain of ownership, including King Farouk and a British officer, the car joined Mr. Barrymore's collection in 1978. The Silver Ghost is featured in the acclaimed Brindle and May book, "20 Silver Ghosts — The Incomparable Pre-World War I Rolls-Royce."

Further highlights from the Barrymore collection include a 1938 Bentley 4 1/4 MR Drophead Coupe with coachwork by Carlton (estimate $160,000-200,000), which was featured at the 1939 Earls Court Motor Show, and a highly desirable 1934 Rolls-Royce Phantom II Continental with coachwork by H.J. Mulliner (estimate $180,000 - $220,000).

Property from the Bill Serri, Jr. Collection

The 1931 Bugatti Type 51 Grand Prix (estimate: $700,000 - $900,000), offered from the collection of the late Bill Serri Jr., represents the final development of the classic Grand Prix racing Bugatti that was first introduced in 1924. From 1930 to the conclusion of the 1933 racing season, the Type 51 was a perennial contender for top Grand Prix honors. With high-profile drivers, such as Louis Chiron, Achille Varzi end "Williams" Glover, the Bugatti team secured outright wins in Tunis and Monaco, as well as the French, Belgian and Czechoslovakian Grand Prix.

The 1966 F1 Eagle-Weslake T1G

One of the top racing attractions in the sale is the exclusive and landmark single-seater racing car, the 1966 F1 Eagle-Weslake T1G, chassis AAR 103 (estimate on request), widely considered to be the most beautiful Formula 1 car of its era and one of only three known examples. An ambitious project, built by Dan Gurney's well-known outfit, the "All-American Racers" in Santa Ana, the car was designed by Len Terry who adapted the already existing Indy car chassis and incorporated the engine from a design by Aubrey Woods and Harry Weslake. This engineering masterpiece was the second of only four Eagles to be outfitted with the Weslake 3-Litre V12 powerplant. The car was driven during the 1967 season by Ritchie Ginther, Ludovico Scarfiotti and team-owner Dan Gurney, who also achieved a third place podium finish at the Canadian Grand Prix. The Eagle-Weslake has been raced by its current owner in such historic events as the Brands Hatch, Goodwood and Pau (where he obtained several class wins), and most recently in the third edition of the Monaco Historic GP.

Aston Martin

The beautiful 1954 Aston Martin DB2/4 Mk I Spyder with coachwork by Bertone and design by Scaglione (estimate: $360,000 - $380,000) was one of three such cars to be custom built to the special order of S.H. "Wacky" Arnolt. Arnolt was a Chicago-based motor car dealer who had a penchant for ordering flamboyant coachwork for his own cars and creations. The brilliant designer Franco Scaglione was one of the first designers to investigate the aerodynamics of the automobile. The 1954 model was the first "real" Aston Martin produced under David Brown's stewardship and thereby acquired the excellent twin overhead camshaft and 2.5-litre engine designed by W.O. Bentley, later to serve as the benchmark for Aston Martin engines for years to come.

The 1964 Aston Martin DB5 Convertible (estimate: $160,000 - $200,000) was first built to the special order of King Hussein of Jordan. King Hussein made two visits to the Newport Pagnell factory to order the car and monitor its progress. The car was shipped to Jordan outfitted with left-hand drive, a Radiomobile 530 TB short/medium wave radio, five-speed transmission, and what is considered now to be an extremely rare detachable hard top. The DB5 has superb handling characteristics, such as 0 to 60 mph in 7.1 seconds and a maximum speed of 145 mph. Only 123 convertibles were produced and most were built in the right-hand form.

Lagonda fit for a movie star

The 1939 Lagonda V12 Two-Seat Roadster with coachwork by Vanden Plas (estimate: $280,000 - $320,000) was ordered brand new by Oscar-nominated actor Robert Montgomery, who starred in the MGM thriller "Night Must Fall" (1937) and Columbia Pictures' comic fantasy "Here Comes Mr. Jordan" (1941). The stunning pre-war roadster, capable of breaking 100 mph, complemented the fast-paced lifestyle of the dashing Hollywood socialite. The Lagonda V12 is considered to be one of the finest designs by Lagonda's chief designer, W.O. Bentley, and only 129 were constructed before the Second World War terminated production. With a top speed gear range from zero to 100 mph coupled with independent front suspension and perfect steering feel, the V12 remains a timeless classic.

The Car of Tomorrow?

Preston Tucker confidently announced that the Tucker Sedan was the "Car of Tomorrow" in 1948. However, just 51 examples of the "Tucker Torpedo" (estimate: $200,000 - $250,000) were built and only 47 survive today. Mr. Tucker boasted that his engineers were able to produce this "new model of conventional design" in only 10 months, compared to the auto industry standard of 20 months. Though some of his automotive features and innovative ideas were to become standard in later years, the company never did achieve commercial success.

Concours poster features '33 Cadillac Fleetwood

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

LOS ANGELES artist Nicola Wood specializes in paintings that depict the California culture, with automobiles personifying the glamour associated with the movie star lifestyle: Lavish surroundings, rich colors and striking beauty are depicted in the cars she paints — as if the cars themselves were Hollywood stars.

This year's Concours d'Elegance poster, painted by Wood (this is her third), is entitled, "The Spirit of '33" and features a 1933 Cadillac Fleetwood with an elegant lady in red seated on the running board, the fox stole around her shoulders stirring in the breeze. In the clouds above her can be seen the "Goddess" hood ornament created by Cadillac's stylist.

Each year an artist is commissioned to exemplify the spirit of the year's Concours d'Elegance in a painting which is then reproduced as poster art. This year, Nicola Wood, known for her "magic-realist" paintings, was asked to capture the prestige of Cadillac on canvas for the 52nd Pebble Beach Concours.

Wood was nominated to become a member of the Automotive Fine Arts Society in 1993 and has garnered four AFAS Awards of Excellence at the Pebble Beach Concours since that time.

The art for the 2002 official Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance poster hides the Cadillac goddess hood ornament in the clouds.

art. Galleries, annual Concours d'Elegance, major collector car auctions and races worldwide provide a chance to become familiar with different types of automotive art. Noteworthy shows include the Pebble Beach and the Amelia Island Concours d'Elegance, Cavallino, and Cincinnati Concours.

Talk to other art owners: These are dependable sources of information. Learn about their favorite auctions and galleries, market intelligence and buying experiences. However, it's best to still choose art you really enjoy.

Seek qualified help from galleries: Worldwide, there are a number of automotive fine art galleries. They exhibit a variety of artwork from recognized artists, as well as memorabilia and collector vehicles. Gallery reps are usually well versed in the field of automotive art and may be able to guide you in your selection.

Choose art that captures the essence of the automobile: Look for something in the art that stirs the heart and mind, and a feeling in the art of timelessness. Does the art evoke a sense of speed, power, excitement, history or nostalgia? Or does it reflect quiet beauty and serenity?

Invest in the best artwork that fits your budget: Original work usually appreciates more quickly than limited edition prints or lithos. But be sure to buy artwork to enjoy, never, never just as an investment, advises William Jeanes, former editor-in-chief of Car and Driver.

HEAD DEPOT 145-7 EUSTON ROAD LONDON. N.W.

In the following years, Alfred owned a Ford, a Rolls-Royce and a 1924 Bentley.

But perhaps the most famous fact about him and his cars was his early infringement of the 12 mile per hour speed limit when he was fined £1 by the local magistrate.

He, or rather his chauffeur, had been caught by a policeman traveling at 22 1/2 miles per hour!

Like many of his fellow motorists, Alfred fell victim to the elaborate speed traps set up by the police which involved men waving flags, stop watches and policemen jumping out of hedges to arrest the offending motorist.

There was much debate in newspapers and magazines at the time and early motorists felt strongly that they were being victimized by a police force who, they considered, would have done better keeping real criminals off the streets.

Alfred contributed to the discussion with an indignant letter to The Autocar but he still had to pay his fine!

However, he had sweet revenge in the end. He produced and advertised his celebrated Bobby Finders (see poster, below) — binoculars which could be fixed to one's motoring goggles to "spot a policeman at half a mile even if disguised as a respectable man." He also advertised a headlamp at this time which would "reveal the secrets of the night." An ad showed a policeman in dereliction of his duty, flagrantly smoking his pipe !

The new dunhill' d-Type watch, which is available at Mark Areais jewelers in Carmel, may not help you avoid speeding tickets. But if you decide to go to traffic court to challenge the accuracy of a CHP officer's radar, it wouldn't hurt to have one on your wrist.
